Moon Is Now Far, Far Away

Everything Was Rosy Few Weeks Ago

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP)—Suddenly, the moon seems far, far away.

A few weeks ago, almost everything was rosy. The Gemini program had been completed successfully with 10 two-man flights. National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials confidently predicted the United States would meet its goal of landing men on the moon by 1970. Privately, some were forecasting a 1968 manned lunar expedition.

Then things started to go wrong. Not little things, but big things that cost millions of dollars, lots of time—and the lives of three astronauts.

The problems do not rule out a moon trip in this decade. But they squeeze the timetable.

The first major problem was the explosion of a second stage of the giant Saturn 5 rocket that is to start astronauts on the way to the moon. The fuel tanks of an Apollo craft ruptured in a test. A Saturn 5 third stage exploded in another test.

The first unmanned launching of a Saturn 5 was postponed from January until at least May.

Serious difficulty plagued the life support system in the Apollo 1 craft. The launching, which would have utilized the smaller Saturn 1 rocket, was delayed from last November until Feb. 21.

But Air Force Lt. Cols, Virgil I. Grissom and Edward H. White II and Navy Lt. Cmdr. Roger B. Chaffee never had a chance to fly. They died on the ground Friday evening, Jan. 27 when a mysterious fire flashed through their spacecraft cabin, melting metal with its 2,500-degree fury.

They were trapped with no way of escaping from such a blaze.

Why no escape? That's one of many questions raised in the aftermath of the tragedy.

Here are others:

Why does the United States continue to use pure oxygen, with its recognized fire hazard, as the breathing system in its spaceships?

Was the Soviet government newspaper Izvesaia correct when it said there was "an element of haste in the entire U.S. moon program? Sources report some tests have been eliminated from the Apollo program in order to maintain a schedule.

Just how safe and how thoroughly planned were the procedures used on pad 34, site of the fire?

NASA and a board of review have thrown a secrecy blanket over the investigation.

Special Request For Crime Control Law

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Johnson will send Congress a special message Monday asking for a new "safe streets and crime control law."

The White House announced Saturday the President's plans to submit the document, promised in his State of the Union address.

Some of the major items which Johnson has said will be encompassed in the proposed law are:

Federal contributions covering 90 per cent of the cost of developing state and local anti-crime plans.

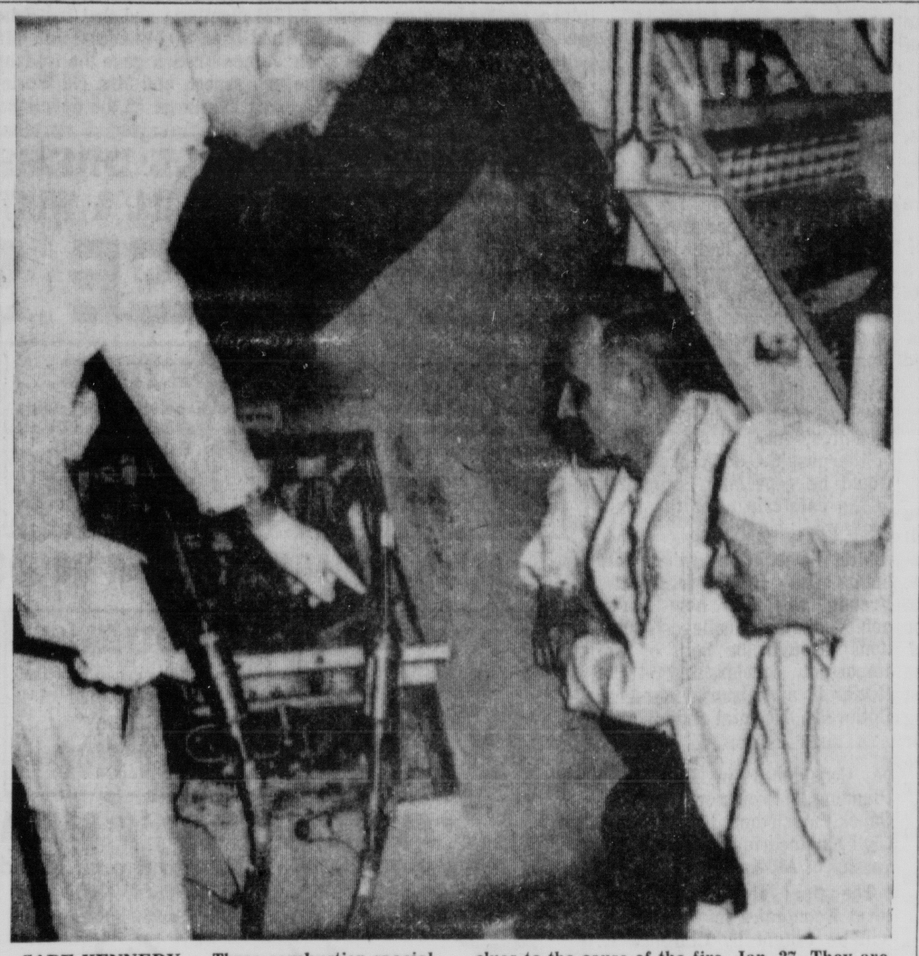

Contributions meeting 60 per cent of the cost of training new tactical police units, developing better communications and alarm systems and introduction of the latest police equipment and techniques.

Federal payment of 50 per cent of the cost of building crime laboratories and police academies.

Johnson also will ask for firearms," and new antidelinquency programs.

Money For Fighting

LISBON (AP) —Portugal says it plans to spend the equivalent of more than $29 million fighting rebels in its East African colony of Mozambique this year. Portugal has some 35,000 military personnel assigned there and 70 000 others opposing rebels in Angola and Guinea in West Africa.

Threatens To Take Steps

Kremlin Demands Halt To Harrassing Of Diplomats

MOSCOW (AP) — Asserting Soviet patience was wearing thin, the Kremlin fired off its second protest in a week to Communist China Saturday, demanding a halt to demonstrations and harassment of diplomats at the Soviet Embassy in Peking. It threatened to take steps to safeguard Soviet citizens and interests in China.

Diplomats in Moscow speculated the Kremlin might be preparing some kind of new move since Peking had ignored previous protests over the past nine days of anti-Soviet demonstrations in the Chinese capital. The diplomats said the Soviet Union might recall its diplomats and lose down the embassy temporarily.

At the same time the Foreign Ministry announced that 200 wives and children of Soviet officials and teachers of the Soviet school in Peking were being summoned home. Forty of them returned to Moscow Saturday.

The announcement said 60 male officials were remaining at their Peking posts.

There was no immediate reaction from Red China, which itself is embroiled in an internal power struggle between Communist party leader Mao Tsetung and President Liu Shaochi. Liu is accused of favoring a Soviet brand of communism which the Chinese call revisionism.

A Tass, Soviet news agency, dispatch from Peking said pro-Mao Red Guards continued their demonstrations outside the Soviet Embassy. The news agency added that a Soviet Embassy bus had been halted by several thousand Chinese, some of whom slashed the tires and took the ignition key from the driver.

"They demanded that the Soviet citizens leave the bus and tried to lynch them," Tass said.

The Soviet protest was sent off against a background of official feuding in Moscow between the Chinese Embassy and the Soviet Foreign Ministry.

Both sides called news conferences to trade charges and countercharges arising from an incident at the wall of the Chinese Embassy Friday night.

The Chinese charged that 31 Russians had threatened them with axes and electric saws.

The Russians denied all the Chinese charges. They accused the Chinese of starting the fight, beating school children and throwing broken glass packed in snowballs at Soviet citizens.

A Soviet spokesman said no axes or electric saws had been used by the Soviet citizens. He said the saws could not have been used because there was no source for electricity outside the embassy.

Nationwide Holding Of Milk Imminent

EAU CLAIRE, Wis. (AP)—The president of the National Farmers Organization said Saturday its nationwide milk withholding action is "imminent" and can be avoided only if processors agree to raise prices to the producer.

"We feel a holding action is going to be necessary, otherwise dairy farmers will still be talking with processors 10 years from now," Oren Lee Staley of Corning, Iowa, NFO president, told newsmen.

Staley conducted what he termed a "strategy" meeting with some 750 NFO county officers and bargaining committees throughout Wisconsin. The conference, closed to press and public, was held in the gymnasium of Eau Claire Memorial High School.

The NFO is seeking $6.05 per hundredweight for Grade A milk and $5 for manufacturing milk. Roughly this would amount to a $1 per hundredweight increase—about two cents per quart—for the farmer.

CAP In Search For Missing Cessna Plane

WHEELING, W. Va. (AP) — The West Virginia Civil Air Patrol Saturday began searching along a corridor from Bellaire, Ohio, to Waynesburg, Pa., for a missing private plane with three persons aboard.

The craft, a Cessna 182 piloted by James R. Clark of Maplewood, Mo., didn't arrive at Waynesburg after taking off from Parkersburg, W. Va, early Saturday.

Passengers aboard were not identified.

A Federal Aviation Agency employe at Parkersburg said Clark landed at Wood County Airport at Parkersburg for gas late Friday night.

No fuel was available, he added, and the pilot took off after filing a flight plan listing Allegheny County Airport at Pittsburgh as his destination.

The FAA said Clark was en route to Newark, N.J.

Marshall Izen At Symphony

Pianist-humorist Marshall Izen will be the featured artist with the Sedalia Symphony when the orchestra presents its second concert of the season Monday night, Feb. 13, at 8 p.m., in the Smith-Cotton High School auditorium under the direction of Abe Rosenthal.

Izen combines a delightful variety of talents ranging from hilarious satire to serious concert music. The concert performance is unique in that it begins with many delightful satires lampooning the foibles of musicians and the concert world. Using the top of the piano as a stage, Izen works the "actors" with one hand, provides the music with the other, and sometimes even manages to perform the tenor lead in these delightful opera spoofs.

On the second half of the program, Izen plays several short works from the serious piano literature and comments on each selection.

Marshall Izen

Izen made his concert debut in Chicago at the age of 16 playing the Beethoven First Concerto. He studied at Northwestern University and De Paul University, where he received a Bachelor's Degree in Music. He later came to New York for study at Juilliar and with the late, renowned Isobelle Vengerova.

Hanoi Sticking To Demands For Lasting Vietnam Peace

Despite LBJ's Offer To Go More Than Halfway

WASHINGTON (AP) — A high government source reported Saturday Hanoi is sticking to demands for a permanent halt in North Vietnam bombings despite President Johnson's offer to "go more than halfway" to end the war.

This source said so far there had been no indications in subsequent delicate dilpomatic probings of any Communist response to Johnson's Thursday news conference statement that the United States recognizes both sides will have to make "certain concessions" to get peace.

He did not foreclose, however, the possibility that secret talks may yet bring some kind of response that could be pursued toward an ultimate break in Hanoi's intransigence.

Presidential adviser Walt W. Rostow also spoke Saturday of "an extremely interesting and delicate phase" of diplomatic peace probes in the wake of Johnson's latest statement.

Rostow added it is not clear to him whether this effort to determine whether Hanoi is seriously interested in peace talks "might turn out to be a negotiating process."

But like the other source Rostow said nothing has happened yet to warrant belief that Hanoi is making a serious effort to start negotiations.

Speaking in a panel discussion before college editors, Rostow cautioned that publicity could destroy the effectiveness of secret and delicate probings of Hanoi's intent and said "this is a bad time to talk about any particular stand which might turn out to be a negotiating situation."

Administration officials believe that North Vietnam is hurting sorely from the air attacks and from military defeats in South Vietnam. Although they have no evidence yet to support it, they predict the turmoil in Red China soon may affect Hanoi's supply line.

In the face of these conditions, they say that in third-party conversations up to now the Hanoi regime has given no sign it is backing away from its position that there must be an unconditional and permanent end to the bombing before it will even consider going to the negotiation table. This is a rather recent stiffening of the line the North Vietnamese took in August 1965 when they spoke only of a suspension of the bombing.

Neither have they given any hints thus far of making what Johnson called "a really serious effort" toward negotiations by offering anything in return for a halt in the bombings — even though Johnson said Thursday the United States would welcome "just almost any step" by Hanoi.

The conclusion of those closest to the matter is that the war will go on for some time to come and all planning is on this basis.

Although it is questionable whether infiltration from North Vietnam is declining substantially, Communist military units have suffered defeats and the Viet Cong is plagued with desertions and a shortage of manpower.

Even though the military situation is regarded as satisfactory, this administration official foresees a crucial period of political development in South Vietnam this spring and summer. This will begin with district and village elections in March.

American officials are generally pleased with the way the new South Vietnam constitution is shaping up. They were happily surprised by Premier Nguyen Cao Ky's pledge to move general elections ahead to three months after the constitution is agreed upon.

Even though the efforts to negotiate an end to the war have been discouraging, they look for a greatly improved situation in South Vietnam by the end of this year.

Concordia Girl Dies In Accident

Car-Train Crash At County Line Takes Girl's Life

Miss Vickie Lou Frerking, 20, Concordia, became the third traffic fatality for Pettis County in 1967 when she was killed in a car-train collision one-half mile north of Highway 50 on County Route FF at 5:45 p.m. Frday.

According to Trooper Richard Joos who investigated, Miss Frerking was northbound when it was in collision with Missouri Pacific passenger train No. 14, which was eastbound. Joos said the car collided with the head engine about six feet from the front of it, tearing away the front of the vehicle and tossing it into the southeast section of the intersection Joos said Miss Frerking was thrown from the car and was killed instantly.

The conductor of the train was L. D. Powell, 64, Eldon, and the engineer was Jacob Ray Salmons, 62, Jefferson City.

Johnson County officials were first on the scene, after reports that the accident had happened in Johnson County. Johnson County Coroner Keith Jones pronounced Mis Frerking dead at the scene. Information concerning the accident was then relayed to Pettis County Coroner Dr. C. Gordon Stauffacher, who did not go to the scene.

The body was brought to the Ewing Funeral Home and was taken to the James Funeral Home, Concordia. The car was towed to Knob Noster by Jenkins wrecker.

Orbiter 3 Rockets On Its Mission

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla (AP) — Lunar Orbiter 3 rocketed moonward Saturday night to photograph the exact sites where U.S. astronauts may land, as America's man-to-the-moon program pressed on despite the Apollo 1 tragedy eight days ago.

Officials hoped the spacecraft would swing into orbit around the moon on Wednesday and gather enough evidence on film during the next 30 days for scientists to decide exactly where it is safe for spacemen to set foot on the lunar surface.

The craft, a duplicate of Lunar Orbiters 1 and 2 which photographed in striking detail millions of square miles of the moon's front and back sides, blasted off at 8:17 p.m. EST as the payload of a powerful Atlas-Agena rocket.

"All systems are looking good," a space agency spokesman said as the 103-foot-tall booster thundered skyward, gushing a great fiery tail which lit up the nighttime darkness around Cape Kennedy.

Several hours of tracking would be necessary, however, to assure the spacecraft was on a proper course.

Lunar Orbiter 3's flight plan called for it to cover the 231,615 miles to the moon in approximately 92 hours, triggering a spacecraft motor Wednesday afternoon to swing into orbit around the moon It was to begin taking pictures Feb. 15 from altitudes as low as 28 miles.

Twelve primary photographic targets were assigned to the craft, including 10 of the most promising astronaut landing

President And Wife Humiliated

TOKYO (AP) — Mao Tsetung's Red Guards have submitted President Liu Shao-chi and his wife to humiliation in Peking, forcing him to recite from the book of Mao's thoughts while standing on a table in a government park. The development, as reported by Peking wall posters, suggested Mao held the upper hand, at least in the capital.

Japanese dispatches from Peking said the wall posters reported the incident as taking place Jan. 26 in Chung Nan Hai Park where the State Council and the Communist party headquarters are located. The park normally is restricted.

At the same time, Chinese Communist news media reported Mao met a visiting Albanian delegation presumably in Peking. A Yugoslav dispatch said photographs of Mao showed him looking well.

The exact whereabouts of both Mao and Liu had been a mystery to the outsde world for months. Liu had been reported to have set up anti-Mao headquarters at Shihkiachwang, about 190 miles south of Peking. There had been other reports that he was under virtual house arrest in Peking.

The wall posters and the reports on the Albanian functions indicated both Mao and Liu may be in the capital now.

Japanese analysts said the accounts of the humiliation of Liu make it appear that his days are numbered as China's president, a post Mao is seeking to regain after losing it in 1958.

But this would not necessarily mean the end of the anti-Mao movement across the nation, for many of Liu's proponents are believed still firmly entrenched.

The Japanese dispatches gave this account of the Liu incident as reported by the wall posters dated Jan. 28:

The gray-haired president and his wife, Wang Kuang-Mei, were taken to a mass rally inside the park district. They were denounced as "bourgeos reactionaries."

Liu was told to recite the first quotation from the red-covered book of Mao's thoughts. Mrs. Liu then faced the shouting crowd and was asked if her husband was able to do it. But he stumbled over the opening phrase and she had to prompt him. The quotation was:

"The force at the core leading our cause forward is the Chinese Communist party. The theoretical basis guiding our thinking is Marxism-Leninism," the quotation says.

Antics Of Rich Hermits

ANTIGUA, British West Indies (AP)—Jacqueline Kennedy lolls on the beach near breaking whitecaps, a towel over her face, tanning. Nearby, police and Secret Service agents keep watch in swim suits and trenchcoats.

Three hundred miles south, on an island called Barbados, Randolph Churchill walks across the living room of his villa where he is working on a biography of his late father. "I came to be alone."

Nearly 2,000 miles west, on the island of Jamaica, it is night and Princess Grace of Monaco is frugging in a miniskirt. Prince Rainier is beating kettle drums. Outside, more guards.

These are the rich hermits. These are three of the rich who enjoy sun, parties and privacy and are willing to pay highly for it in the emerald waters of the Caribbean.

There, on three of many islands—Antigua, Barbados and Jamaica—the rich hermits have built homes that run up to $450,000, on land up to $50,000 an acre, just to tan in privacy a few weeks a year.

They hire special guards. They fly in private jets. They come first for the December holidays, then eight weeks later for that envied status symbol, the February tan.

They come from Paris, London, Montreal, New York and Rome. They come from social registers, divorce courts, nobility and wealth.

They come to be hypnotized by the pounding surf, by the haunting lyrics of the calpyso. Some come to lose their troubles in planter's punch and to bronze their bodies in the tropical sun.

The rich hermits cluster together behind signs which read "PRIVATE" and guards who wear helmets. They pay up to $1,000 a season to belong to clubs which make it their job to keep people out.

In Anituga, the hermit es called a "Reefer" and he lives at Mill Reef Club.

Mill Reef is an American-owned millionaires' retreat covering nearly 1,000 acres on this eastern Caribbean island. There are some 50 homes—minimum price $60,000.

The entrance is a bumpy dirt road guarded by natives in white. An old sugar mill stands behind the gate. Olive trees grow out of the rocks.

Membership in Mill Reef is gained only through active members. One can be a guest there only once, unless he buys stock.

Homes in the complex include the rambling stone mansion of the Paul Mellons, a tiered cliff-side castle which has its own overseer and rooms for a dozen guests. Jacqueline Kennedy has stayed there twice.

Mrs. Mellon, called Bunny, is an attractive, publicity-shy woman with a penchant for the color blue. Her staff at Mill Reef wears blue livery. Pillowcases, sheets and even the family jet are blue.

Mrs. Kennedy spent most of two weeks there this winter, swimming in Half Moon Bay, below the mansion, tanning by the Mellon pool, taking unnoticed shopping excursions into town, and dining with friends inside the complex.

The rich hermit is not bothered by the island natives. The hermit is "boss man." More likely, it is the society set itself who intrude upon one another.

Former Secretary of State Dean Acheson, poet Archibald McLeish and the Macy department store family also have homes here. One can play golf, tennis, swim, sail and entertain unobserved. Servants live in. Islanders—mostly poor cane cutters—rarely see Reefers outside of the complex.

Most food and liquor is flown in by private jet. There are no telephones, except a primitive microphone hook-up for relaying messages to the downtown office, an hour away. Newspapers arrive days late.

The Antigua government is adamant in its protection of Reefers.

"We insist on privacy," said Premier-elect Vere Bird." When these people come to Antigua, they want to be left alone. It's a government responsibility to see that they are."

In Barbados, the rich hermit lives along Sandy Lane on the Caribbean, only 200 miles or 40 air minutes south of Antigua. It is the easternmost island in the Caribbean, only 200 miles from Venezuela. It is remote—just what the hermit likes.

"Other islands are getting too public," says Marian Javits, wife of New York Sen. Jacob Javits. "We came here to get away, to be left alone."

Claudette Colbert entertained singer Frank Sinatra and Mia Farrow at her mansion in January and made it plain they were not to be bothered.

"This is a private visit during which he hopes to be able to get the absolute privacy and quiet which has eluded him everywhere else in the world," she said. "I have assured him his wishes will be respected." Guards were added assurance.

From Barbados, the trail of money swings northwest 2,000 miles across the Caribbean, to Jamaica. One bypasses Puerto Rico. The jet set considers it passe, strictly for tourists and politicians. The hermits call San Juan "East Miami Beach."

For a boating hermit, St. Thomas in the Virgin Islands offers a brief stopover. At $2,000 a week, one can have wall-to-wall carpeting, caviar and bone china aboard a chartered yacht.

"Most of our customers are everyday people, though," says skipper Frank Burke. "The real rich guys own their own boats."

In Jamaica, the rich hermit lives at Round Hill and Tryall, both near Montego Bay on the sunny, northern beach strip of the island.

Jamaica is different from the aristocratic Antigua and remote Barbados. Jamaica swings, dances, moves day and night. Instead of sprawling out on a virgin beach alone, one is more apt to attend a beach party.

The hermits who seek Jamaica still seek privacy, but of a different kind. The privacy of parties, the privacy of taking shoes off with friends and raising a ruckus behind closed doors. They do.

Butlers Facing Out

Editor's Note—Britain has about 600 real, old-fashioned butlers and really, old haps, some of the new ones simply don't measure up. Too many part-timers, who learn the trade in schools, and many are even foreigners! And some, alas, are tipplers and tappers.

By EDDY GILMORE

LONDON (AP)—In this egalitarian era, the old-fashioned English butler still buttles on, but his tail-coated ranks are thinning.

Buttling circles estimate 600 butlers of the old school still discreetly tread the carpeted corridors of the great houses. Today, however, many so-called butlers are really butler-valets, or butler-parlormen, or even butler-valet-chauffeurs.

The real butler is, of course, almost as stately as the stately home he inhabits, commanding respect from a squad of underlings, and respect from his boss and his boss' guests. He has his own valet, and at mealtimes is served by lesser servants who run his errands and address him as mister.

The grandest of them all is, perhaps, Mr. Aulton whose employer is Queen Elizabeth II at Buckingham Palace. He is so grand he is called a steward. He is the Mt. Everest of buttling.

The butler of the new school is a morning-coated gent who may work week-ends, or go out daily and nightly buttling at a different house or apartment every 24 hours. This sort of gentleman's gentleman is turned out by the buttling schools and gets his employment from agencies, which are flourishing.

Quite often the butler of the new school is an Italian, Spaniard or a Portuguese. Things have gotten so tough that even the Duke of Bedford's butler is from Portugal. Ironically, the duke's ancient family motto is: "What will be will be."

The buttling agencies are often run by ex-butlers, such as George Reeve.

"Buttling is a most honorable profession," says Mr. Reeve, "but you must have a calling for it. Not everyone is equipped psychologically to be a butler."

Er, ah, hemm, I see.

"We have a very promising young chap on our books, but unfortunately he won't be staying with us. He has a calling for the police force."

Some of his men are, like Mr. Reeve, ex-butlers. For their services he charges three guineas—$8.82—a day. A guinea is a snob pound, worth a shilling, or 14 cents, more than a pound.

The best buttling agencies discourage tapping, which means hinting for tips. A saucer with a coin placed on it in a cloakroom—and placed there by the butler himself—is flagrant tapping.

One of Mr. Reeve's most splendid butler is Payne. It is very difficult to live up to Payne. For one thing he was once the butler of Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson, now the duchess of Windsor.

"I believe I was the second person to know of the king's decision to abdicate," he once recalled. "Those were very trying times for us all."

Payne is a thin, waspish, patrician who, when necessary, can freeze the new rich or the untutored with a tone of voice as icy as 20 below zero.

Not long ago a young butler spoke to Payne in what Payne considered a tone of lese majeste.

"He told me that he had served the queen—and that he'd had no complaints," said Payne. "I said, 'Young man, I have served her majesty, and her mother and her grandmother. So don't you tell me about serving the queen.'"

"I can assure you I had no more nonsense from him. Served the queen, indeed."

Because of the temptations provided by their surroundings—plenty of drink and easy access to the bubbly—butlers sometimes fall from grace.

Buttling circles tell a story about one of their number who got so lit up on a grand occasion that he put the wife of his noble employer across his knee and spanked her.

Old-fashioned butlers still wince at the terrible memory of a gentleman's gentleman who got so stoned before a certain dinner that he entered the dining room naked except for a starched collar and white tie. The guests ignored the boiled butler—at least through the soup course.

"That, sir," commented one of the old-fashioned ones, "is sang froid of a superior quality."

What happened to the culprit? "On his way out he hardly got a good reference."

Britain's brain drain has almost been matched by what could be called the Payne drain.

Peter Hunt, of the Hung-Regina Agency, knows of an American family who asked for an experienced butler to take charge of a house with 26 employes under him. The family is at home only 12 weeks out of every year. The pay—$650 a month. In England the same man would be paid about $250 a month.

There once was a squadron leader who resigned from the Royal Air Force, attended a butler's school and sailed across the Atlantic to work as a gentleman's gentleman for $500 a month. His wife worked as a maid in the same household for $300 a month. After 10 years in America—including Palm Beach in the winter and Maine in the summer—he returned, built a house and retired.

Buttle on.

TRANSPLANTING OF TEETH is being done successfully by a Swedish doctor, Karl-Erik Thonners of Stockholm. Although the "new" tooth comes from the transplant patient himself, it is removed completely for 15 minutes before being put back in the mouth. Dr. Thonners uses teeth that have grown into the jaw because the space they would ordinarily take was too narrow. He rearranges the other teeth, making room for the "new" one. While out of the mouth, the transplanted tooth is kept alive by being placed in a serum.

Right Of Privacy Has Suffered Badly

WASHINGTON (AP) — A White House panel said today there has been "severe erosion" of the individual's right to privacy in recent years by electronic and other eavesdropping by industry and government.

"Indeed,' declared a panel appointed by the President's Office of Science and Technology, "modern electronic instruments for wiretapping and bugging have opened any human activity to the threat of illicit invasion of privacy."

The group, headed by Dr. Kenneth E. Clark of the University of Rochester, hit at what it termed "the widespread and often callous use of various devices for eavesdropping, lie detection, and secret observation in politics, in business, and in law enforcement.'

The panel was appointed in January, 1966, specifically to explore possible threats to privacy posed by "certain procedures in behavioral research" — that is, research into human behavior.

Many Hopes Are Doomed At Start

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — It's the season of rising hopes, most of them doomed.

It's a time for personal appearance tours, good fellowship, flowing cocktails. The town's two trade papers, Daily Variety and the Hollywood Reporter, are great with adman's brainchild. Mailmen stagger under loads of movie invitations and sound-track albums.

The object of all this affection? The 2,800 voting members of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. This week and next they're marking ballots to pick nominees for the 39th annual Oscar Awards April 10.

Why all the fuss over a $60, 6¾-pound, 13¼-inch, gold-plated statuette? (1) Prestige, in the form of the forever-after adjective, "Academy - Award - winning," and (2) money. An Oscar for best picture is said to be worth $1 million at the box office.

Publicity agencies collect special fees for "academy campaigns." Movie ads invite academy members to show their membership cards for free admission to likely contenders.

Paramount, pushing "Alfie," mailed academy memebrs a booklet resembling a bachelor's date — "Annie, cute redhead, keeps house well. Lilly, excellent company while husband is convalescing in hospital." The center section quotes from reviews — "Michael Caine is an Oscar candidate."

Producers of "Hawaii" held a reception for supporting actress Jocelyne Lagarde, described as a "mountainous, 6-foot, 400-pound native Tahitian." This proved to be an exaggeration — not unheard of in Hollywood — when Miss Lagarde confessed she had dieted down to 300 pounds.

Most promotional salvos are in the trade press at $300 per black-and-white page — or up to $1,500-$2,000, including artist and engraving fees, for four colors.

Thus, in "The Russians Are Coming," Alan Arkin "springs full blown into instant stardom." "The Bible" is "a masterpiece." "The Professionals" is Burt Lancaster's "best film." Lynn Redgrave in "Georgy Girl" is "a superbly gifted star." Producer Jack Warner presented an eight-page "Virginia Woolf" spread "for your consideration."

The ballyhoo will intensify after the Feb. 20 announcement of nominations — five in each category among the actors, directors, pictures, etc. Does campaigning do any good?

Only in getting possible contenders consideration by academy members, says a spokesman.

"The academy feels members are astute enough not to vote for a bad picture or performance," he adds. "Some people win Oscars without any advertising. When did you ever see an ad by Spencer Tracy?"

TOP SHOTS. Adolph and Elizabeth (Plinky) Topperwein could perhaps be considered the Jack Dempseys or Babe Ruths of rifle shooting. Ad, recently inducted into the Texas sports Hall of Fame, five years after his death, and Plinky still hold many records for the sport—even though they retired from competition and world touring in 1940.

A short Bible ceremony was presented before the installation ceremony by Helen F. McNew, Anna White, Verna Palmer, and Betty Upton, with Marjorie Egbert as pianist and soloist.

The incoming Noble Grand was honored by her officers in a ceremony wishing her good luck and best wishes. Mrs. McNew sang "May You Always Walk In Sunshine," accompanied by Mrs. Egbert. They gave Miss Barrow an arm bouquet of colorful flowers and a gift.

The retiring Noble Grand, Mrs. Cleo Smith, was also honored with a ceremony given by her officers. Mrs. Delaine Upton and Mrs. Egbert sang "Memores" and she was presented with a bouquet of flowers and a gift. Mrs. Upton presented Mrs. Smith with a Past Noble Grand pin from the Green Ridge Rebekah Lodge.

Borrowing Being Discouraged

FARGO, N.D. (AP) — Dakota National Bank of Fargo had some advice for the man who robbed the bank's southside branch.

"We highly disapprove of and discourage further anonymous borrowing," said the bank in an advertisement in the Fargo Forum Thursday. "Somehow, you must have the wrong idea about full-service banking."

The gunman who robbed the bank of nearly $600 is still at large.

Device Discontinued

OAKVILLE, Ont. (AP)—A safety device which locked doors on some model Fords whenever their speed went above eight miles per hour has been discontinued in Canada, a company spokesman said. The reason: Canadian car washers used rollers to spin the wheels during cleaning, thus activating the locks.

Jaycee Wives Hold Monthly Dinner Meet

Seven Warrensburg Jaycee Wives were guests at the monthly dinner meeting of the Sedalia Jaycee Wives Tuesday evening. Henry Keeler spoke to the group about the Crime Alert Program, explaining how the Jaycee Wives could become involved. Following the introduction of Mrs. David Sparks as a new member, Mrs. Glen Riekhoff gave an explanation of the discussion groups, Great Decisions.

The Jaycee Wives will sponsor the Missouri State Queen of Fairs contest for 1967. Chairmen are Mrs. Dean Johnson and Mrs. Robert Johnston. Mrs. Walter Loveland, Jr. will handle reservations; Mrs. Al Letourneau will be working with publicity; Mrs. Carl Zimmerschied and Mrs. Dennis Onwiler are in charge of gifts for the Queen; Mrs. Donald Brownfield and Mrs. Tom Miller will handle flowers and decorations and Mrs. Bill Wolff is in charge of the Coronation Tea.

Mrs. Carl Zimmerschied, parliamentarian, presented a program on parliamentary procedure.

Mrs. Donald Timbers announced that there will be a Valentine Party on Feb. 10.

Mrs. Dennis Onwiler stated that all preparations are complete for the Jaycee Wives for the State Board Meeting to be held on Feb. 24, 25 and 26. Mrs. David Curry announced that togas for the Roman Holidays are being provided courtesy of the students in the Latin Club at Smith-Cotton High School.

Mrs. Dennis Onwiler reported the Crime Alert Project is nearing completion.

Mrs. John Sweezy asked for volunteers to help with the Easter Seal Campaign, which the wives are sponsoring.

The Jaycee Wives will sponsor a Follies presentation, which is a type of Broadway production working with the Cargill Production Organization. Local talent will be used for this stage show. General Chairman for project is Mrs. Eddie Wise. Other chairmen are Program and Advertising, Mrs. Ralph Steiner; Tickets, Mrs. Bill Wolff; Publicity, Mrs. Jim Mayes.

Mrs. Don Timers and Mrs. Al Letourneau will serve coffee at the Building Contractors Meeting.

Mrs. Adam Fischer, a Jaycee wife, is chairman of the Mothers March of Dimes. Many wives volunteered to help her.

Three Jaycee Wives received the Outstanding Jaycee Wife of the Quarter Award. They are: Mrs. Bill McWhirt, Mrs. Dennis Onwiler and Mrs. Carl Zimmerschied. These girls were honored for the work they have done in the Jaycee wives.

Mrs. David Curry reported that the Wives are still driving the children from the Retarded School skating each Thursday. Drivers for the month of January were Mrs Bill McWhirt, Mrs. Bill Wolff, Mrs. Fred Busker, Mrs. Walter Loveland, Jr., Mrs. Jim Mayes, Mrs. Don Brownfield, Mrs. Tom Boehm, and Mrs. Don Timbers.

Mrs. Kenneth Bruns asked for birthdays or anniversaries within the club.

Mrs. Fred Busker led the Jaycee Creed, after which Mrs. McWhirt, who presided at the meeting in the absence of the president, adjourned the meeting.

NO SPEED DEMON, this little "shuttle car" might nevertheless solve some of today's traffic problems. Designed by a group of Syracuse University students, it would have a top speed of 20 m.p.h. for travel on neighborhood streets and would be powered by fuel cells. Other features would be a warning device against collisions, swiveled seats for easy entry, and a unit to report such vital information as tire and road condition. The model shown here is in two-fifths scale.

MARSHALL IZEN
Pianist-humorist

Marshall Izen, pianist and humorist, received a Bachelor's degree in music from De Paul University in Chicago. He studied at the Juilliard School of Music, New York City, in preparation for a concert career. Through a series of odd adventures, his unique musical and satiric talents first received recognition in several New York supper clubs. His many appearances on television have included the Ed Sullivan and Steven Allen shows. Mr. Izen's thorough musical background adds dimension and substance to his humor as well as refinement and taste to his serious offerings. He is now delighting discriminating audiences everywhere.

"Marshall Izen's work is unique. Using the top of the piano as a stage for miniature settings, he manipulates puppet performers with his right hand and accompanies on the keyboard with his left hand and sings all the voices. Mr. Izen's program includes monologues on musical subjects . . . a demonstration of "how to play the piano in six easy minutes" which turns out to be chaotically and hilariously complex. He demonstrates his concert skill with variations on Happy Birthday in the style of various composers. Here is a much gifted and original performer."—New York World Telegram.

See No Unease In Rhodesia

By LYNN HEINZERLING

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (AP) —"Do you see any people running around with revolvers?" the Rhodesian businessman asked. "We're supposed to be a threat to world peace."

You don't see many guns. There aren't even many uniforms along Salisbury streets where modern skyscrapers alternate with low colonial-type buildings.

There is no impression of urgency or uneasiness as the old British colony takes its stand against almost the entire world.

Show windows and store shelves are piled high with life's needs and life's fripperies. Streets are jammed with parked cars, parking lots are clogged. An occasional miniskirt floats by.

Africans and Europeans mix easily, if not familiarly, in streets and stores. In Cecil Sqoare, the same African forms are stretched out in the shade of the jacaranda trees as on independnece day, Nov. 11, 1965.

At Jameson and Third streets the British Union Jack flies beside the Rhodesian flag outside Prime Minister Ian Smith's office.

He seems more relaxed than on the day he proclaimed this colony an independent state in defiance of Britain.

After negotiations last December which came within an inch of success, official contacts between the British and Rhodesian governments have lapsed. Britain's Prime Minister Harold Wilson has stated he will not recognize full Rhodesian independence until an African government is installed.

Months of voluntary sanctions do not seem to have altered much the relaxed, comfortable life of Rhodesia's whites. The big test of mandatory sanctions, imposed in December by the United Nations in an effort to thwart Rhodesia's principal exports, lies ahead.

But even African diplomats at the United Nations foresee no conclosive result from the sanctions unless force is used to back them up—and there is no sign that the big powers, including Britain and the United States, will agree to force.

Even so, international efforts to spurn Rhodesia have eroded its trade, especially with Britain. The best estimate is that only a third of Rhodesia's big 1966 tobacco crop was sold "under the counter" for cash. No trade statstics have been published since the day of independence. Even the British government does not know precisely how its old colony is doing.

What about sanctions?

"Don't worry, we'll make it," says one business leader.

"It's all very stupid, but we'll pull through," says another.

This is Salisbury's most alluring season. The flamboyant trees are in flaming red bloom. The pastel blossoms of the frangipani trees are beginning to appear. Bougainvillea and other tropical plants are in gorgeous flower.

In a recent month 80 new houses and buildings were started in Salisbury; people in Bulawayo built 44 swimming pools this season.

City parks, where both white and African children play, are well populated. Cricket pitches are much in use.

But there are subtle changes. British and American products are disappearing.

The Boston baked beans in the supermarket may come from Bulawayo. The canned fruit may be from Gwelo or Johannesburg rather than Florida.

Food, however, is hardly a problem. Good Rhodesian steak is selling for 50 cents a pound, pork chops for 44 cents. Butter is 56 cents a pound and eggs 50 cents a dozen. Fruits and vegetables abound.

The Rhodesian clothing industry has expanded enormously. Teen-agers are very fashion conscious and manufacturers are trying to meet the trends.

Hardware stores feature tools made in West Germany and there is a full line of bicycles from South Africa. Most shoes seem to be locally made.

British sweets and chocolate, long favorites here, have disappeared. Swiss and Dutch chocolate is still available, but Rhodesia is now making its own sweets. When a Bulawayo firm advertised for help in manning its new candy factory, 300 Africans turned up for jobs.

Rhodesians are enthusiastic lunchtime and "sundowner" drinkers and all the brands of Scotch whiskies and British gins are available. They presumably come from South Africa.

But the key to Rhodesia's future is tobacco, by far its most important export. In 1965 tobacco exports amounted to $131.6 million, about a third of total merchandise exports that year.

President Charles de Gaulle apparently has approved a barter deal with the Rhodesia Tobbaco Corp. By the best available yardsick, $5.6-million worth of tobacco will ex echanged for French textiles. France abstained when the Security Council voted sanctions against Rhodesia.

Last year's crop of 250 million pounds was taken over by the government for resale wherever possible. The most reliable information obtainable here is that perhaps two-thirds of the crop is in storage.

The government, it is reported, sold one third of the crop for about $32 million to a half dozen Western and Eastern European countries, China and South Africa. A similar amount presumably was reserved by two large tobacco companies on a contingent basis—that the sale would be completed when it became legal to do so.

Outside Salisbury the government is building huge new storage sheds. Growers will start bringing in this year's crop in April. By July it will be known —to the government, at least— whether salesmen have been able to break through the new sanctions to sell any significant part of another 250 million pounds.

When Smith seized independence Rhodesia's supply of oil and gasoline was a vulnerable spot.

Britain succeeded in blocking delivery of crude oil to the colony through the pipeline from Beira in Mozambique to the Feruka refinery in eastern Rhodesia. South Africa, refusing to interrupt normal trade in any way, saved the day. Oil and gasoline now are being delivered by rail through Mozambique and Botswana and by truck to Beitbridge in southern Rhodesia.

Gasoline is rationed but by paying an extra 40 cents per gallon for off-ration coupons, a motorist can buy as much as he needs. This brings the price of unrationed gasoline to $1.27 a gallon. The price before independence was 56 cents.

Distributing companies have increased their storage capacity. The government has built 22 tanks of 180,000 gallons capacity each at Rutenga, a railhead not far from Beitbridge on the South African border. More tanks are going up.

Normal requirements of gasoline are about four million gallons a month. Under rationing, the economy can move on about 5 per cent of that amount.

There is believed to be enough agsoline in storage to meet Rhodesia's needs for six to nine months if a total cutoff of supplies came.

All statistics are taken with reservations here. The government's security arrangements seem airtight and newspapers are censored.

Reliable economists, however, figure that exports fell to about $252 million last year, roughly $140 million below the 1965 figure. If a commonly mentioned figure of $224 million for imports is correct, Rhodesia had a favorable trade balance of $28 million.

Zambia, the northern neighbor dedicated to overthrow of the Smith government and installation of black rulers, remains one of Rhodesia's best customers. Its president, Kenneth Kaunda, wants to cut off trade, but he is bound by economic realities to the use of Rhodesian coal, meat, clothing, building materials and other manufactured products.

The trend is downward, however. To eliminate Rhodesian imports, Zambia has turned to South Africa for more of her requirements.

Rhodesia and Zambia still operate the Rhodesia Railway, Central African Airways and the huge Kariba hydroelectric power complex which powers Zambia's copper industry.

However, the railwa yis being divided between the two countries and Zambia has given notice that she wants to do the same with the airline, which earned $1.4 million profit last year.

Rhodesian businessmen are hardheaded. Many of them advised against the unilateral declaration of independence. They have now seen a year of ineffective voluntary sanctions disrupt the economy to a degree.

They do not look forward to the long-term effects of mandatory sanctions, but they are determined to resist them.

"I didn't go along with the declaration of independence," one of them said. "But in common with my colleagues we are not prepared to bring this government down to please a lot of African nations."

Another said the declaration of independence was a "stupidity," but the only possible course was to help the government resist and circumvent sanctions.

Unemployment and restlessness among the African population were reckoned by some to bring despair to the Smith government. It hasn't happened, although estimates of unemployment run between 20,000 and 40,000 out of a total African labor force of about 650,000.

Thousands of Africans have packed up and gone back to reserves where they live, as most Africans do, on a subsistence level.

Next to tobacco, asbestos is the most important Rhodesian export listed for boycott by the United Nations. It was worth $30 million in 1965.

It is reported that Rhodesia has enough asbestos piled up in Mozambique ports to meet shipping requirements for six to nine months.

Large quantities of chrome, also listed, are awaiting shipment in Beira, it is believed.

Thousands of acres formerly devoted to sugar have been planted with wheat.

Rhodesians count on South Africa and an easy relationship with neighboring Mozambique — a Portuguese area — to pull them through.

Next to Smith's portrait, the most popular decorations in shop-windows are signs saying: "Thank you, South Africa" and "Obregado (thank you), Mozambique."

In a 1,200-mile tour through the countryside, the only military activity seen was near Kariba. It is known that the Rhodesian government has deployed troops in the Zambesi Valley on the border with Zambia to combat infiltration of terrorists.

An unknown but relatively small number of these terrorists, some trained in Moscow and Peking, others in Ghana and Tanzania, has been rounded up.

At Kariba, where the huge power project churns out electricity for both Zambia and Rhodesia, all was hot, drowsy and peaceful.

An Englishman having his tank filled at the single gasoline station said all was quiet around Kariba and there was no panic about terrorists.

"But," he added, "anybody who says it can't happen here needs to have his head examined."

Bulawayo, with its broad streets and gardens, seemed awake, but barely so. A fortissimo pop group called "the Savages" was contributing to the wakefulness in a gloomy cavern of the main hotel.

In the factory district, a few small crowds of Africans were looking for jobs. The factories seemed to be operating normally, but you don't talk about operating schedules in Rhodesia.

Prime Minister Smith's Rhodesian Front is being nibbled at from both wings. One group, threatening to form a new party, says Smith and his Cabinet made a tactical error in rejecting the most recent British offer, and that negotiations should be reopened.

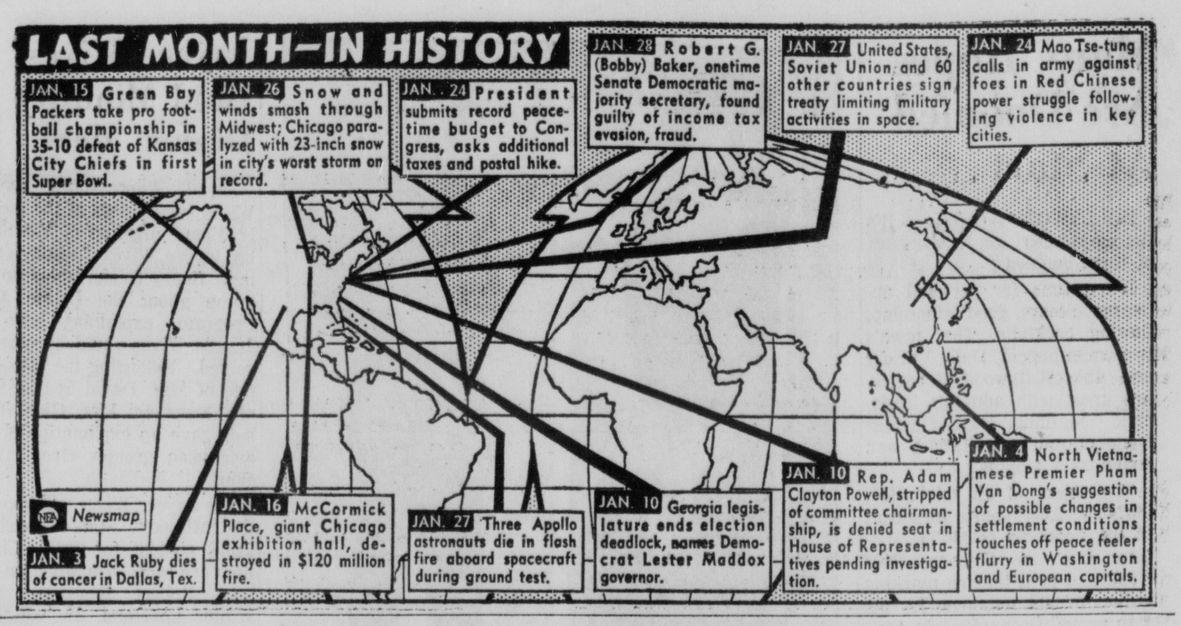

From the extreme tip of the other wing, another faction asks in a letter to all Rhodesian Front members: "Why, in fact, were British terms even discussed?"

Whatever course the Rhodesian government chooses, the decision will be watched by South Africa and Portugal. There is more at stake in this part of Africa than the color of the Rhodesian government.

Most black-ruled states to the north of Rhodesia have pledged themselves to eliminate white rule from Africa. Neither of Rhodesia's helpful neighbors hhould look approvingly on any move which would facilitate or move forward the attempted accomplishment of that pledge.

Sir Humphrey Gibbs, the man recognized by Britain as governor of Rhodesia and by Rhodesia as a private citizen, still holds out in Government House here.

He rarely speaks and when he does his remarks are censored from the Rhodesian press. Each month the Rhodesian government sends him a $700 bill for rent. And each month his secretary files it among the unpaid bills.

To Fly Fixed-Wing 'SST'

Editor's Note — The SST race may be the jet story over again. europe had the first ones but lost the market to the Americans. The British-French Concorde will be the first SST to fly, with the Soviet TU144 in the race. But the Boeing swept-wing SST may yet take the market, if anybody can lick the sonic boom.

By GRANVILLE WATTS

BRISTOL, England (AP) — Swing-wing or fixed wing, is Europe about to win the SST battle and lose the war?

That jargon is not really too difficult: A British-French partnership will almost certainly be the first to fly an SST — supersonic transport — and it will have a fixed-wing. But will the United States then come along with a bigger, faster SST — and one with a swing or moveable wing — and sweep the world market?

It happened once before, with the jet airliner race. Britain was first, with the Comet, but the United States picked up the chips with the Boeing 707 and the Douglas DC8.

In the SST race, the British joined hands with the French, because of the vast costs and knotty engineering problems. Together they settled on the Concorde, a sleek bullet of a plane that will do the London-New York trip in just over two hours.

The Concorde is a fixed-wing type, even though the swing-wing is often credited to a British inventor, Dr. Barnes Wallis. American sources attribute the swing-wing more to the experiments of John Stack, back in the 1950s.

The United States hasn't even decided yet to build an SST, but has selected a Boeing swing-wing design if and when. The final decision to proceed now rests with President Johnson and Congress. The Boeing design was chosen over a Lockheed fixed-wing type because of a belief that a swing-wing offers aerodynamic advantages.

In flight the wing, gradually recedes as speed increases, presenting less air resistance.

Says a spokesman for British Aircraft Corp.: "The swing-wing in a supersonic airliner is a terrific problem. We lowered our sights and decided to build something on the knowledge we have."

The Concorde prototype is due to fly a year hence; the Boeing SST is not expected to fly before 1971. The Anglo-French ship is designed to fly at 1,450 miles per hour, the Boeing about 1,800. The Concorde will carry 136 passengers, the Boeing about 277.

If the Boeing flies, some aviation experts here believe it could be the old story over again — the Europeans getting in ahead with a small aircraft which is overtaken by a bigger U.S. type.

"It could be that the Concorde will have the 1970s but lose out to Boeing in the 80s," one observer said.

The Concorde development program was originally estimated to cost $476 million. This has rocketed to $1.4 billion, split down the middle between Britain and France.

The Concorde project, started under a Conservative party government, was almost killed when the Labor party won the general election in 1964. Harold Wilson, the new prime minister, called for a review of the program. President Charles de Gaulle warned that France would go to the World Court if the British pulled out. Britain backed down. Now the Wilson government has come around to cherish the Concorde as a winner.

To date, 15 world airlines have placed orders for a total of 69 Concordes, valued at more than $1.12 billion.

"We are working on the assumption that Concorde will make something in excess of $280 million a year for at least seven years," said Pat Burgess, British sales chief for Concorde. He forecast a market by 1975 for 200 Concordes, worth $4.2 billion.

On present figures, Concorde will cost $16.8 million each without spare parts. The U.S. jet is expected to cost double this.

The French are designing and building the center fuselage and the wings at the Sud Aviation Works in Toulouse.

The British Aircraft Corp. is building the forward fuselage, nose, tail fuselage and fin, and the engine bays, with the assembly line at Bristol. The aircraft will be powered by four British Olympus engines with French modifications.

BAC has just delivered the last piece — a tail fin — for the first prototype, called 001, at Toulouse. At Bristol the rear fuselage and fin is completed on the second prototype, 002.

"There's really no difficulty in working on different pieces in Britain and France," said a BAC official .

"It's just as if the pieces were in separate hangars. We have French Liaison people working with us and there are Britons at Toulouse. The whole thing has worked out well."

BAC official John Clark admits that there will have to be a premium fare on Concordes.

"This is to protect the subsonic airliners. We anticipate a rush to ge on Concorde when she first enters service," he said.

The one big problem ahead is sonic boom — caused when an aircraft breaks the sound barrier.

The problem will not affect Britain as the Concorde will be well out over the Atlantic before she becomes supersonic. But if the Concorde is to carry on westward across the United States to San Francisco, the sonic boom will occur over land.

"People seem amazed, but we don't really know what to expect on this before Concorde flies," Clark said.

The Americans do. Sonic boom tests around Oklahoma City have shown that the sound waves can shatter windows and nerves, at the very least.

Clark said BAC is not worried about competition from Boeing's 747 jumbo jets, designed to carry an estimated 500 passengers. This plane, now being built, is not supersonic.

"They are going to appeal to a different sector of the market," Clark said. "Our first passengers will undoubtedly be businessmen who want to cross the Atlantic quickly."

"But we would draw attention to a recent survey among passengers which showed the idea of supersonic flight was 'favorable by a wide margin'." Clark said a typical comment was: "Getting there as fast as possible is the reason for flying."

The Soviets are also in the supersonic race. A model of the Soviet TU144, shown at the 1965 Paris air show, looked remarkably similar to the Concorde. Like Concorde, the TU144 has a fixed wing. It is designed to carry 121 passengers and cruise at 1,500 miles per hour. The Soviets hope to fly it in 1968, perhaps before the Concorde.

But, in the long run, will Boeing beat them all?

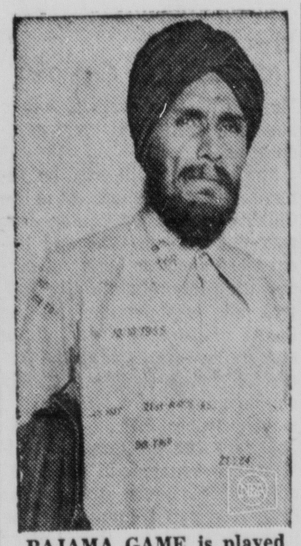

Increase In Building Funds Is Reported

NEW YORK (AP)—Contracts for future construction in Missouri in 1966 added up to $1,229,135,000, an increase of nine per cent over the previous year.

As expected, residential contracts were down, the drop being 11 per cent. However, contracts in that field added up to $428,931,000.

The F. W. Dodge Co., in its monthly report, said non-building construction totaled $393,163,000, up 55 per cent over 1965, and non-residential was $407,041,000, up 4 per cent.

December contracts totaled $74,944,000, down 32 per cent from December, 1965. All classes were down, non-residential, at $25,414,000, down 2 per cent; residential at $20,205,000, down 32 per cent and non-building at $29,325,000, down 45 per cent.

PAJAMA GAME is played with a purpose by Puran Singh in India, who has a grievance to his government written on his garment. Hoodlums stole the carpenter's tools and meager earnings in 1955, but, he says, "No police official listened to me." In protest, he has trekked 900 miles annually since then to New Delhi in attempts to get an interview with the prime minister.

Zip Code Training Program Held

Mrs.

Music Club and various other business, social and civic associations.

Mrs. Flower will best be remembered for her interest in the Children's Therapy Center. Her generous gifts of time and talent were a major factor in perpetuating this rehabilitation project. She was president of the Board of Directors for three successive years during the formative period. Her devotion has continued and, in no small part, is responsible for the remarkable fact that the Center's facilities are equaled in Missouri only in St. Louis and Kansas City. A recent resolution of the present Board of the Center reads as follows:

"Our Sincere Gratitude for Your Inspiration and Initiative in the Original Organization of the Children's Therapy Center.

"Your Leadership for Many Years as President of the Board of the Children's Therapy Center.

"Your Contribution to the Relief of and Assistance to Handicapped Children and Adults.

"Your Unselfish and Devoted Service to the Unfortunate.

"Your Generous Gifts of Time, Service, Sympathy, Understanding and Possessions to the Cause of Humanity.

"Your Unstinting Devotion to the Highest Principles of Public Service and Community Improvement.

"The New Hope and Achievements You have Inspired in Others."

In 1956, Mrs. Flower was presented the Optimist Award for Outstanding Work with Youth.

In 1965, her accomplishments were publicly recognized when the Chamber ot Commerce named her Sedalia's Outstanding Citizen.

Truly, Virginia Flower has made a rich contribution to her community. She will be remembered eternally with admiration and affection.

Funeral services will be held at 2:30 p.m. Tuesday at Broadway Presbyterian Church, conducted by the Rev. Garner S. O'Dell, pastor, and the Rev. Warren Neal, Arlington, Tex., former pastor of the church here.

Music will be provided by the church choir.

In memory of Virginia, memorials to the Children's Therapy Center are suggested by close friends of the deceased. In respect to Mrs. Flower, the Center will be closed all day Tuesday.

Steelman In GOP Speech In Sedalia

Dorman L Steelman of Salem, Republican state chairman, said Saturday night "Republicans want to take the government out of the hands of the wheeler-dealers and give it back to the people."

Steelman spoke to a Republican meeting held at the Masonic Temple, here in Sedalia.

He charged both the state and national Democratic administrations were responsible for what he called "steamroller government."

Steelman made his comments in a speech prepared for a McKinley Day dinner.

"Press censorship came to the Missouri House under the leadership of Governor Hearnes," Steelman charged.

"The well-publicized and bitter struggle in which the governor brought down the leadership of the Missouri House of Representatives and replaced it with his own hand-picked man has culminated in the most flagrant case of news management this side of Washington, D.C.

"There are carpetbaggers in the capital . . . men who do not live in the districts from which they are elected. This is against the letter and spirit of the constitution."

Steelman also objected to Democratic votes preventing a resolution calling for an investigation to be printed in the journal and refusing to print amendments or resolutions of the minority Republicans.

"This, in effect," he said, "hides from the people the alalternative measures presented and the voting record on these alternatives."

BEWARE OF AMATEUR MEDICAL ADVISERS
It seems that almost everybody is eager to practice medicine. Mention having an ailment of any kind and everyone from helpful friends to advertising medicine men offer a treatment. They are like the blind leading the blind.
The fallacy of amateurs is that they only treat symptoms of sickness, not the cause. Only a physician has the knowledge to diagnose what is causing the trouble. Once this is known, a cure more often results. The physician prescribes the particular medicine his long studies and experience decides is best. That is why prescriptions are more effective than patent medicines. We can fill any prescription.
YOUR DOCTOR CAN PHONE US when you need a medicine and we will gladly deliver it without charge. If you prefer you may pick it up at our drive up window. Controversy Over When Moon Came KARACHI, Pakistan (AP)—A seemingly insignificant controversy over what night the new moon put in its appearance over Pakistan at the end of the Moslem fasting month Ramadan carried tones of dissatisfaction with President Ayub Khan's government.

A moon-sighting committee appointed by the government reported that it was sighted Wednesday night, Jan. 11, so Moslems could break their day-long fasts and embark on their annual festival of prayers, banquets, gift-giving and merriment.

But a large number of mosques were padlocked the following day. Many ulemas—Moslem priests—then reported sighting the Eid moon Thursday night and announced the fast could be broken Friday, the 13th.

Political observers saw significance behind the controversy. They said the government wanted to make sure the moon was sighted Wednesday but the opposition made sure the sighting was a day later since celebration of Eid on a Friday is inauspicious and bears bad omen for rulers.

The government arrested five of West Pakistan's top religious leaders last Sunday under defense of Pakistan rules.

Those arrested were said to have made speeches in mosques "inciting the people against the government" over the Eid moon dispute. The five were among those who disputed the government's sighting of the moon.

The defense of Pakistan rules, which permit indefinite detention without hearing or trial, give Ayub a strong hand in dealing with his opposition. Just how serious the opposition is remains to be seen. Ayub's political opposition is disorganized, some of it just getting going after several years in prison.

Some of this is fundamental—people are unhappy when their stomachs are empty and Pakistan's food shortages are mounting. Wheat is selling for a record high price in West Pakistan. Similar problems are reported in East Pakistan, where the people are mostly rice eaters.

The United States has been helping out with about 1.5 million tons of wheat per year, and at the same time has been backing a massive program aimed at food self-sufficiency.

Drought has increased the deficit to nearly 2.5 million tons. American reserves are dropping and there is some question whether Ayub will be able to meet the needs.

Nevertheless, Ayub's economy, somewhat more regimented than India's, has shown encouraging gains.

Export earnings last year jumped 12 per cent and in the first five months of the present fiscal year are up 14 per cent.

The foreign exchange position is expected to improve slightly now that the jute crop, Pakistan's big foreign exchange earner, is moving to market.

Pakistan's gross national product increased 4.8 per cent last year. This was lower than the planned 6.5 per cent, but a noteworthy gain. Western observers say the fiscal gains would have been met but for the drought.

Selling Slices Of U.S. Is Business Of JFK's People

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business News Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Some former members of the Kennedy administration are busy these days as directors of a mutual fund that seeks to sell foreigners on the profit potential of owning a bit of America.

Among them are Pierre Salinger, former White House press secretary; Charles U. Daly and Richard K. Donahue, former staff assistants; William Mahoney Jr., a former ambassador; and Ivan Nestingen and John Stillman, once sub-Cabinet officers.

For tax purposes, and in order to offer customers accounts, designated by numbers rather than names, the fund operates from the Bahamas, where there are no income, sales or inheritance taxes, and where American taxes cannot apply.

Although perfectly legal, the fund may be criticized by nations which cannot afford to have capital drained abroad. Criticism may develop also over the numbered accounts. Sometimes such accounts are the repository of illegally obtained funds.

The officers contend, however, that this money would find its way abroad anyway and that some of it already is invested outside the country of origin. They add that numbered accounts will be limited to 5 per cent of the total and that the directors will check background of those seeking them.

Operators of the fund also say that it will bring a flow of gold back to the United States, thus helping ease pressure on the dollar.

Few of the directors have had any previous direct involvement in mutual funds.

Donahue, now a Lowell, Mass., lawyer, and Keith Barish, a young Miami, Fla., investor, returned recently from Latin America, where they began building a sales force of natives and businessmen already based there. Next trip is to the Middle East.

Donahue is vice president of the fund's management company. His firm is also legal adviser. Barish is secretary-treasurer.

The fund leaves little doubt in an investor's mind that he is buying something American. It's deep blue circular insignia is centered with an eagle on the chest of which is bannered a red and white shield.

The real estate portfolio invests 70 per cent of its money directly in American real estate, the remainder in real estate securities. Investors in the mutual fund portfolio have their money reinvested in 10 other mutual funds.

The common stock portfolio is promoted as according foreign investors the chance to acquire "a financial interest in the shares of many of America's best-known companies."

The directors, all of whom are stockholders, receive a $1,000 annual fee. The officers take no pay, as yet, but could become wealthy merely from fund growth and commissions.

Extension Club Notes

South Abel Extension Club held its January meeting at the home of Mrs. R. C. Chancey.

After a contributed dinner the meeting was called to order by Mrs. William Duensing, president, and roll call was answered by eight members. There were also two guests, Mrs. H. H. Brooks and Mrs. Emmett Fairfax.

Mrs. Walter Rissler gave the lesson on kinds and quality of wool matereal. Mrs. Junior Bohon gave a report on the 4-H activities.

A collection was taken for the March of Dimes and the club voted to continue making cancer dressings.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Junior Bohon on Feb. 14, at which a program was planned on Civil Defense and Safety.

NEW DELHI, India (AP)—The chairman of India's University Grants Commission, D.S. Kothari, says the country should concentrate on educating the masses in remote villages and slums.

He described India as an "almost totally illiterate country" whose only hope to end poverty and raise living standards if education.

Highlights Of SC Latin Club Meeting

The highlight of the monthly meeting of the Smith-Cotton Latin Club Wednesday was a humorous dramatization in which the corpse of the poisoned Emperor Claudius "attended" a banquet given by his evil widow, Agrippna.

They were accompanied on the piano by Georgia Edmonson. Another musical number, a flute duet entitled "Sound of Music," was presented by Micele Ferrari and Jennifer Van Vickle. Debra Lyles served as their accompanist.

The humorous skit concluded the meeting. Those participating in the play were Gregory Gary, Michele Ferrari, Jim Denny, David Jones, Roger Kahle, Chuck Huddleston, John Ball, Steve Shoemaker, Debbie Pelham, Cathy Binderup, Jaynee Rhoads, Libby Cain, Connie Cooper, Jill Ulmer, Tony Shaffer Jessica Brown, Dee Ellison, Cathy Warbritton, Linda Dittman, Lynda Davis, Reed McGregor, Charles Stanley, Rick Huddleston, Fred Bluhm, Andy Alexander and Bill Woolery, Mr. John C. Ferrari's Pack Takes Over In Continental Road Race

Chaparal Spins Off Wall To Lose Slot

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Ferrari's pack of red racers took command of the 24-hour Continental Road Race Saturday night when a Chaparral which had led for three hours spun off a wall and went into its pits for repairs.

Coming out onto the track after one stop, the Chaparral's driver, Phil Hill, hit an oil slick and bounced off the wall twice.

As he limped back to his pit, three Ferraris which had been riding hard on Hill's fire-spitting tailpipe in the darkness charged into 1-2-3 leadership.

The accident was the break Italian sports car manufacturer Enzo Ferrari had awaited. Expecting that the Chapparal might burn itself out in the pace-setting role he had kept his full fleet of factory speedsters in position to take charge.

Coming back with a vengeance after losing his world championship to Ford last year, Ferrari now was in great shape to win this first of the 1967 title races.

All of the Ford Mark II's which brought the championship to this nation in 1966 were behind him now and some were experiencing dificulties. There are "a lot of little things," a Ford spokesman said.

Hill, the Santa Monica, Calif., daredevil who became the first American to win a world driving championship, piloted the weirdest-looking machine in this first race of a series for the 1967 World Sports Car Championship.

Mounted to the car and suspended two feet over his head was a device resembling a clipped airplane wing. Operated from the cockpit, it presumably helped to slow him as he shot into the sharp curves of the 3.81-mile course to help save wear on his brakes.

The sun broke through a heavy overcast as the 59 racers in the field snarled away in a moving start before some 25,000 spectators.

Hill, darting to the front, built his average speed up from 115 to 117 miles an hour and moved a half-mile ahead of the pack. For a time he was followed by three Ferraris in a row, driven by Lorenzo Bandini of Italy, Pedro Rodriguez of Mexico City and Mike Parkes of England.

Then, in rapid order, the Ferraris made their first pit stops for fuel. A Ford Mark II driven by Andretti snarled up into second place. Lloyd Ruby of Wichita Falls, Tex., in another Mark II, edged into fifth.

Germany's rugged little Porsches, given an outside chance because of their great durability, lay well back in the early going. One of the factory's prototypes ran into trouble, making two pit stops in the first four laps.

The favored Mark II, driven by A. J. Foyt, former Indianapolis 500 champion from Houston, and Dan Gurney, one of the world's greats from Costa Mesa, Calif., also went into the pits twice in the early going for repairs.

The race, in which Ford is defending its world championship against a mighty comeback by Ferrari, will end at 3 p.m. EST Sunday. By then, the gruelling pace will have put more than half of the racers out of competition.

Some 25,000 spectators were expected to stay through the night and to the bitter end, enduring the constant assault of thundering engines on ear drums.

Colorado Out Of Bid For First In Loop

NORMAN, Okla. (AP)—Oklahoma knocked Colorado out of a three-way battle for first place in Big Eight basketball standings Saturday, defeating the Buffs 71-66 in a televised game here.

Colorado was in a three-way tie with Nebraska and Kansas State for the conference lead before the afternoon game. Each had won 4 and lost one.

Oklahoma (2-4) took a brief 4-0 lead just after the opening tipoff, but quickly dropped behind and stayed there until the final minutes of play. With 2:22 left, Willie Rogers hit a 20-foot jump shot which put the Sooners out in front 62-61.

Pat Frink of Colorado led the scoring with 25 points, followed by Oklahoma's Don Sidle with 23.

Sports Scraps

By D. Kelly Scruton

FRIENDS of Frank Ervin are getting steamed up in encouraging sports writers and sports casters who are members of the Missouri Sports Hall of Fame to elect the former Sedalian to that honor. Some are under the impression that Ervin has to be nominated. This is not true, as he has already been nominated and his name will be among the list of eligibles again this year.

The efforts to gain the honor in his home state is to impress on those who are eligible to vote his standing in the sports world. This really — at least to me — should not be too hard, as he has already scored honors in the harness racing sport such that no other trainer or driver has enjoyed.

This past week, it was gratifying to see action taken by the Pettis County Historical Society by giving its endorsement to Ervin and ask that Ervin be elected to the Hall of Fame. I understand other civic groups and organizations plan on resolutions supporting the nomination of this great horseman.

I am confident when this information is all gathered together, along with the history of Ervin, it can be compiled and mailed to each person who receives ballots for voting on the Hall of Fame. Certainly their every consideration is deserving at least and the information furnished them will have a bearing on how they cast their ballot.

KANSAS CITY is really out to compete in pro athletics against St. Louis, with recent developments whereby a hockey team is now being franchised as well as a franchise for a basketball team for Kansas City. This compares with St. Louis, which has the Hawks, and now the St. Louis Blues hockey team, while both cities have pro baseball and pro football teams.

It is understood the Kansas City hockey team will work hand - in - hand with the St. Louis Blues. The Kansas City team will be affiliated with what will be known as the Central Hockey League, and will be a type of minor league. Kansas Citians are hopeful after the test is tried in the minor league they can obtain a major league franchise.

If everything Kansas City is trying to get going develops, then that Kansas City sports complex which has been discussed the past few months will become a MUST. As it is now the auditorium downtown will have to divide time with the hockey, basketball and other functions which are often held in the big building.

One can say it again. The success of the Chiefs the past year and the tremendous support the football team has received in advance ticket sales for next season already is the spark that has put the fire under Kansas City to go after more and more.

But they must not lose sight of the badly needed support these projects will have to have from surrounding communities in Kansas and Missouri as far out as 100 miles. Those fans produce a big percentage of attendance whether the "wheels" in Kansas City realize it or not.

'Death' Match And Battle Royal On Wrestling Card

Two of professional wrestling's hardest-fought events — a "death" match and a battle royal — are on tap Tuesday night at Convention Hall.

The novel death match will feature the teams of Sonny Myers - Earl Maynard and Guillotine Gordon - Bob Brown.

Rules of the clash call for elimination of falls and the time limit. The action will continue until one side either quits or is unable to answer the bell because of injury.

Myers and Maynard, the former Mr. Universe, specifically asked for the liberalized rules after posting a decision over the same team opponents last week.

Myers clinched the decision by locking Gordon in the sleeper hold. Upon recovering, Gordon tore into Myers. Maynard attempted to pull Gordon off, but Brown grabbed he husky West Indian grappler from behind and worked him over. In evfect, the pairing of the two teams will be a grudge event Tuesday.

The eight-man battle royal also promises some hard-hitting, free-swinging action. In that warring will be Maynard, Myers, Gordon, Brown, Francisco Rios, Lee Henning, the Viking and Victor Rivera.

Each contestant will post a $75 entry fee, with the winner to tale it all. Elimination will occur whenever a participant is thrown over the top rope and onto the arena floor.

There will be two single matches on the card as well. The veteran Henning will match his power against that of the Viking, considered one of the most dangerous area heavyweights. Rivera will test Rios in the opener.

Florida Coasts To 83-75 Win Over Vanderbilt

Jerry Lumpe Will Speak At Booster Meet

The Sedalia Booster Club will have Jerry Lumpe, former Warsaw baseball player, well-known to local fans of the old American Legion and Ban Johnson ball clubs. Lumpe is now with the Detroit Tigers.

He has been in the major league circles since graduating from the "sand lot" baseball of this area. First going with the New York Yankees and then the Kansas City Athletics. He was traded a couple of years ago. In the winter time he is a business man in Springfield, but as soon as the first blade of grass turns green, he heads for the training camp, preparing for the summer baseball season.

Jerry informed Marvin Blaine, a close friend, he would be "happy to come to Sedalia" and especially to talk to the Booster Club.

John A. Herbst, president of the club, announced it was the decision of the Board of Directors at its meeting Thursday night to make the meeting open to the public. Anyone who is not a member of the Booster Club can contact a member for reservations.

Clay Favored In His Title Fight

HOUSTON (AP) — Cassius Clay, still appealing his 1-A status in the military draft, will defend his disputed world heavyweight title for the eighth time Monday night in the Astrodome against Ernie Terrell, recognized as champ by the World Boxing Association.

Clay is a 4-1 favorite with little betting interest reported by legal Las Vegas bookmaking establishments.

The 15-round match in the unique domed arena is expected to boost the 25-year-old Clay's earnings since he won the title from Sonny Liston close to the $3 million mark.

About 35,000 fans are expected to watch the bout in person and many thousands more will see it on closed circuit television or via the two satellites to Europe and Asia. The scrap also will be carried on radio by the Mutual Broadcasting System.

The two fighters are due to enter the ring at 10:30 p.m. EST and actual fighting is due to begin at about 10:40 p.m. EST.

For the first time in his career as champ, Clay will be taking on an opponent with an advantage in height and reach. Clay, 6-foot-2½ inches, with a 79-inch reach, will be facing a stiff left jab thrown by the 6-6 Terrell with his 82-inch reach.

Clay, who prefer to be known as Muhammad Ali and is appealing his draft status on Muslim ministerial grounds, has a perfect 27-0 record with 22 knockouts. He won the crown when Liston quit in his corner at Miami Beach, Feb. 25, 1964. In two 1965 defenses he wiped out Liston in one round and stopped Floyd Patterson, another ex-champ, in 12 rounds at Las Vegas.

When Clay's comments about the Vietnam war and the complications of his draft status resulted in many states banning him from its rings, he went elsewhere in a busy 1966.

He beat George Chuvalo in Toronto, Henry Cooper and Brian London in England and Karl Mildenberger in Germany. Then he came to Houston to flatten Cleveland Williams, a local favorite, in three rounds, Nov. 14.

Terrell, a quiet soft-spoken man in contrast to the gabby Clay, became the WBA champ March 5, 1965 by beating Eddie Machem in Chicago after the WBA withdraw recognition from Clay because of his return bout contract with Liston.

Big Ernie, a guitar player who has his own singing group, defended the WBA version of the championship against Chuvalo, Nov. 1, 1965 and against Doug Jones in Houston, June 28.

Terrell has a 39-4 record for 43 starts since 1957 and has knocked out 18 men. His main forte is a left jab thrown with stinging effect although he claims he can punish a man with his right hand.

Grain Valley got away to a fast start in the first period of action, as they lead 15-8, at the end of the quarter. But, in the second period Grain Valley turned cold as they were only able to get four points, while St. Paul's tallied for 15 points, to take the lead at the half, 23-19. The third quarter was a fairly even batttle, as St. Paul's picked up their lead to six points as they outscored Grain Valley, 15-13. In the final period St. Paul's started rolling again, as they outscored Grain Valley, 13-4, for a 51-36 victory.

High scorer for St. Paul's, was Kollmeyer with 18 points. High fro Grain Valley with 15 points was McMillan.

Freshmen Tigers In Tourney

Coach Wes Sanders, Freshman Tigers of Smith - Cotton High School enter the Clinton Tournament Monday with hopes of returning with the championship for 1967. The Tigers have so far this season compiled a commendable record of 8-2.

The Tigers have played three of the teams entered in the eight team tournament, winning four of the five games played against them. The Tigers set down Knob Noster twice by close scores. In the first game it took a valiant come-back effort on the part of the Bengals to win 48-44. In the second game it took a three-point play by Dennsi Johnson in the winning seconds for a 41-40 victory. The locals have likewise set down the Clinton Cardinals on two successive occasions. In the first game the Tigers walked away, 43-27, and in the second the Cardinals made a stronger resisting effort but were still defeated, 63-56. The one loss was to Warrensburg, a 47-40 defeat that was one of the few dismal spots in a successful season.

The Tigers first game will be at 8:30 p.m. against Warsaw. If the Bengals should add the Wildcats to their list of the vanquished they will advance to the semi-finals either Harrisonville or Clinton.

Games the S-C cagers could possibly end up in are the semi-finals at 8:30 Thursday, the third-place tilt at 7:15 Saturday, the consolation semi-finals at 6 Thursday, the consolation finals at 6 Saturday, or — if things hold well — the 1967 championship game at 8:30 p.m. Saturday.

The teams that will be battling for the first-place trophy are, besides Smith-Cotton, Warsaw, Clinton, Harrisonville, Knob Noster, Pleasant Hill, Warrensburg and Windsor.

Robinson Sets Sights On New Job

NEW YORK (AP) — Frank Robinson, full of honors and mellow now in his regained stardom, has set his sights on a lofty pinnacle — to become a major league baseball manager.

"The prejudice against Negroes in baseball is dying to a certain extent but it is still there," he said calmly. "it is just a matter of time before some owner breaks the color line with a manager.

"He must be a solid, sound baseball man, and not chosen merely because of his color. If he is right, he won't have any trouble at all."

Robinson gives the impression that all the glory he has won on the playing field is nothing compared to becoming a manager.

"I'd love to be one. Don't ask me why."

Glory he has a-plenty. He is The Associated Press Male Athlete of the Year for 1966, the American League's Most Valuable Player, the American League batting champion at .316, the league's leading home run hitter at 49, the league's leader in runs batted in with 122, the winner of the Hickok $10,000 gold and diamond belt as Professional Athlete of the Year, the winner of the Babe Ruth Award as best player in the 1966 World Series and possessor of a new $100,000 per year contract.

Robinson's mellowness is new. Traded before the 1966 season by the Cincinnati Reds to the Baltimore Orioles, he came with a reputation of being some what hard to handle. Leading the Orioles to the American League pennant and then to a four game sweep of the World Series over the Los Angeles Dodgers he was all tact and diplomacy.

Now a frequent after-dinner speaker, he is poised and articulate. He had 25 engagements this winter. The previous winter he had none.

Robinson's big year in Cincinnati was 1961 when he won the National League's Most Valuable Player title.

In fact, he is the only man to be MVP in both major leagues. But in 1963 his batting average slipped to .259, rose to .306 in 1964, then declined to .296 in 1965. His popularity dipped, too. Both are on the beam now.

Soph Guide Team

MADISON, Wis. (AP)—Sophomores guided the University of Wisconsin track team to its second dual-meet victory of the season 92-49 over Iowa State Saturday.

Sophomore Mike Butler matched a school record winning the 70-yard high hurdles in 8.4 seconds. Junior Aquine Jackson won the 60-yard dash in :06.2, also matching a school mark.

In Bob Hope Classic

Strong Victory Bid By Sanders

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Doug Sanders knocked five strokes off par for a 67 Saturday in a strong bid to win the $110,000 Bob Hope Desert Golf Classic for the second straight year.

As Sanders' rival big name professionals fired and fell back, dapper Doug toured the Bermuda Dunes Country Club course in 33-34—67 to post a 72-hole total of 279, nine shots under par for the route.

The 90-hole grind ends Sunday.

Tom Nieporte, a 37-year-old club pro from Locust Valley, N.Y., scored his third straight 68 for 280, while George Archer had a 66 and Frank Boynton, another club pro from East Euclid, Ohio, registered a 65, the lowest round thus far, giving each a 281.

Play over the four par 36-36—72 courses was blessed with ideal weather — sunny, warm and virtually windless.

Jack Nicklaus played the first nine in 37 and then put together a string of three straight birdies on the 11th, 12th and 13th holes. But he hit out of bounds on No. 14 and took a double bogey six. He finished with 34 and 71 for 283.

Arnold Palmer, two-time winner of the Hope event and loser to Sanders in a playoff last year, never did get untracked, and his 76 for 289, 10 strokes behind Sanders, practically eliminated Arnie in the race for the $17,600 first prize.

Billy Casper had a 73 for 285. It had been freely predicted that the Big Three plus one — Nicklaus, Palmer, Casper and Sanders — would wreck the usually easy Bermuda Dunes layout. Only Sanders delivered.

Young Tom Weiskopf, the surprise leader after three rounds, faded with a 77 for 287. He took a four-over-par seven on the sixth hole at La Quinta Country Club as he hit the ball from one side of the fairway to the other.

Chilhowee Loses To Deepwater

The Deepwater Demons downed the Chilhowee Indians in a non-league game played at Deepwater Friday night, 74-36.

Deepwater took the lead in the first quarter, 16-14, and never relinquished it the remaining part of the evening. The Demons in the second quarter, increased on their two-point lead to six at the half, as they led 37-31. In the third quarter Chilhowee continued to try to cut into the lead tha Deepwaer had built in the first half, but when the period ended they were once again outscored, 17-15. In the final period, Deepwater again outscored the Indians, 20-17, to come away with a 74-63 victory.

High scorer of the game and high for Chilhowee was Phillips with 24 points. High scorer for Deepwater was C. Chaney with 19 points.

Chilhowee was trounced by Deepwater in the B game, 87-27. High scorer for the junior Demons was Sapp with 23 points. High for Chilhowee was Houk with seven points.

The next game for Chilhowee will be Tuesday night at Chilhowee, when they play Sherwood.

Scoring by quarters:

Chilhowee	14	17	15	17—63
Deepwater	16	21	17	20—74

Individual scoring: Chilhowee — Phillips, 24; Marksberry, 22; Beavers, 6; Courtney, 4; McKinzie, 3; D. Courtney, 4; Ficke, 3. Deepwater — C. Chaney, 19; Hendrix, 17; F. Chaney, 14; J. Chaney, 13; Ammons, 8 Dehn, 3.

Krausse Inks Pact

KANSAS CITY (AP) —Righthander Lew Krausse, who enjoyed his finest season in the majors in 1966 with a 14-9 record and 2.98 earned run average, has returned his signed contract to the Kansas City A's.

"Last year he began to show the benefits of his experience in the minors," said Ed Lopat, A's administrative assistant. "We are looking forward to a great season from him."

Krausse, a $100,000 high scrool bonus baby, pitched a three-hitter and shut out the Angels in his first major league start in 1961. Then arm trouble set him back. He is 22, a native of Boothwyn, Pa., and his father, Lew Krausse Sr., pitched for the A's in 1931-32.

To Move Farm Club

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Sid Abel, coach and general manager of the Detroit Red Wings, said the Memphis Wings of the Central League will probably move to Fort Worth, Tex. next season.

The Memphis club is a red wing farm team.

"While we haven't made a firm commitment, we are within an eyelash of moving," Abel said. "The Fort Worth deal is by far the strongest. It's very enticing."

The Wings moved to Memphis in the 1964-64 season from Cincinnati.

Fourth Straight Win

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Unbeaten Notre Dame made it four straight dual victories in swimming and handed Missouri its seventh straight loss Saturday, 62-42.

John May, sophomore freestyler, led the Irish. John Putnam of Missouri set a Rockne pool record in the 1,000-yard freestyle, a new event, with an 11:13.4. Doug Ehrhardt of Missouri won diving honors with 235.55 points.

First Major Victory

SYDNEY, Australia (AP)—Dennis Ralston of Bakersfield, Calif., scored his first major professional tennis victory Saturday when he defeated Fred Stolle of Australia, rated the world's No. 1 amateur last year, 7-9, 6-3, 6-2. A crowd of 4,500 saw the match.

Stolle, winner of the U.S. Championship at Forest Hills in 1966, failed to produce the form he showed in his first match against Ralston, which he won easily.

Ryun Wins Sullivan Honors

NEW YORK (AP) — Jim Ryun, 19-year-old world mile record-holder, was named Saturday winner of the James E. Sullivan Award as the outstanding amateur athlete of 1966.

The slender University of Kansas sophomore, who ran the mile in 3:51.3 at Berkeley, Calif., last July 17, was the overwhelming choice of a panel consisting of members of the Amateur Athletic Union Board of Governors, sports writers and broadcasters.

He received 750 first place votes, 187 for second and 77 for third for 3,838 points that made the competition a virtual runaway.

Don Schollander, a Yale junior from Lake Oswego, Ore., and former winner of the Sullivan Award for his four gold medals in swimming in the 1964 Olympics, was second with 145 first place votes and 1,861 points. Third place went to Bill Toomey, a graduate of the University of Colorado now living in Santa Barbara, Calif. Toomey a two-time U.S. decathlon champion, had 93 first place votes and 1,231 points.

Ryun is the third youngest athlete to receive the award. Only decathlon champion Bob Mathias in 1948 and Schollander in 1964 were younger.

Ryun set five American allcomers records during the year, including the 800 meters, 880 yards, 1,500 meters and two mile run in addition to his fantastic mile.

Hard Work To Retain Slim Lead

LIBERAL, Kan. (AP) — The Women of Liberal figure they face an uphill battle in their efforts to retain the slim lead they hold on their annual pancake race with Olney, England, Tuesday.

But they aren't about to flip in their skillets.

For one thing, they'll be running without Rachel Crites, 18-year-old receptionist who won the international title last year in the record time of 1 minutes 4.5 seconds to give Liberal a 9-8 edge in the Shrove Tuesday competition. Rachel has moved away.

Another thing, they've learned that speedy Janet Bunker is running again for Olney. Miss Bunker won the Olney leg of the 1966 race in 1 minute 5.1 econds — just .6 of a second slower than Miss Crites.

On the plus side, Mrs. Beth Still, who pushed Miss Crites all the way, will be back. She has a four-week-old baby and has not had much opportunity to practice for the race, however.

A dozen women, including one who plays basketball and tennis and another who was a track star in high school, make up the Liberal field. Others may get in.

The competition between the two cities began in 1950 when Liberal challenged Olney to make an international affair of the race which has marked Olney's observance of Shrove Tuesday for more than 500 years.

The races are run over 415-yard S-shaped courses in the two towns. Times of the local winners are compared to determine the champion. During the races the contestants must toss a pancake into the air three times from skillets they carry.

Ashe Demonstrates Why He's On The Top

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Richmond's Arthur Ashe downed fourth-seeded Cliff Ritchey 6-4, 7-5 Saturday and demonstrated to the homefolks why he's rated the top amateur tennis player in the nation.

Ashe showed overpowering strength in the match, beating the San Angelo, Tex., player in only an hour.

In the morning's second singles match, third-seeded Charles Pasarell of Santurce, Puerto Rico, dispatched Chuck McKinley of Fort Washington, N.Y., 6-3, 11-9.

The results made Ashe and Pasarell, past teammates on both the Davis Cup tour and at UCLA, opponents in Sunday's 2 p.m. finals.

Democratic Head To Discuss '68 Campaign Plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic state chairmen and vice chairmen have been asked to meet here March 30-31 with national party leaders to discuss 1968 campaign planning.

In announcing Saturday night that he has called the session, National Chairman Jorn M. Bailey said, "it comes at a time in our preparations for the 1968 campaign when an exchange of national-state party views and plans is especially important.

"We will have announced a number of specific and important programs and we will have others in the planning stage by this late March meeting."

A session of the National Commttee already is scheduled for March 10. The committee has responsibility for national campaign planning.

The gathering of state chairmen will afford an opportunity for airing and smoothing over some of the complaints and discontent flaring up after the Republican surge in last November's election.

The Republicans won a net of eight governorships from the Democrats Nov. 8 as well as picking up 47 House seats, three Senate seats and about 700 seats in state legislatures.

Bailey's announcement of the meeting recognized by implication the dissatisfactions among some state party leaders.

Miss Bacall In A New Part Today

NEW YORK (AP) — Lauren Bacall was a film star who, like it or not — and she didn't — spent most of her Hollywood years playing the same basic character, a sexy feline type with a patented smouldering look.

Years passed, 21 of them to be exact, until December 1965, when Lauren Bacall was suddenly the hit of Broadway in "Cactus Flower." She plays the part of a prim nurse in a dentist's office indulging the maddest sort of broad comedy. Miss Bacall's career was off on a galloping new start.

Thursday night television will see her in still another medium when she appears on ABC's "The Light Fantastic, or How to Tell Your Past, Present and Maybe Your Future through Social Dancing."

Lauren Bacall has done little television over the years, but this program is a sort of sneaky audition.

"I want to do a musical," the actress said. "Maybe this program will convince the right people that I can do one. Anyway, I feel I can. I've danced since I was a child and I've been taking singing lessons for the past 2½ years. And I've proved in 'Cactus Flower' that I can do comedy."

The TV program with the tortured title was written by Arthur Laurents, whose credits include "West Side Story" and "Gypsy," so presumably Miss Bacall's very public bid for attention is in competent hands. She is very serious about it — as would be any performer who only recently was able to break out of a Hollywood casting prison.

Lauren — originally Betty — Bacall emerged from a stage-struck New York youngster to be a young actress with a tiny part in a Broadway flop. Spotted by a fashion magazine editor, she became a popular model. A magazine cover picture attracted film producer Howard Hawks, who signed her to play Humphrey Bogart's leading lady in "To Have and Have Not." She was a smash—and it was the beginning of a new life and a legend.

A year after the film was released she married Bogart after a furiously publicized romance.

That movie and others rather like it—most of them costarring with Bogart—are still much around television on the early and late shows.

"I guess I have not done much about television," she said. "I did do 'The Petrified Forest' with Bogie—that was live and very interesting. And later I did 'Blythe Spirit' with Noel Coward."

At Bogart's death in 1957, her life was stalled at dead center. She left Hollywood and lived abroad with her two children for almost a year. Returning to New York she played in a show that only briefly survived dismal reviews. Then in 1961 she married Jason Robards Jr., an established stage actor, and they have a son, Sam.

Although she spent many an hour at cocktail parties trying to convince assorted producer friends she could handle comedy David Merrick's offer to star in "Cactus Flower" came as a surprise. She grabbed it.

"This thing has done something marvelous for me," she said.

THE THINGS A "SWINGER" DOES. Sizzling Ann-Margaret is a girl with many charms. In the new George Sidney production, "The Swinger," she gets a chance to display a good many of them, and has an absolute ball in doing so. Ann-Margaret does everything from motorcycle to strip in the hilarious new comedy in Technicolor for Paramount Pictures which opens Sunday at the Fox Theatre. Directed by George Sidney, "The Swinger" is the inside story of what really happens behind the scenes of those "girlie" magazines.

Henry Lange Top Benton Corn Grower

Henry Lange, Sr., of Cole Camp is the Benton County Corn Growing champion. Lange had a field that made 160.75 bushels an acre to top the 42 Benton County entries in the corn growing contest sponsored by the Missouri Farmers Association. Lange has been a frequent winner at the Missouri State Fair in the competition for best 10 and best 70 ears of corn.

The Benton County corn growers were honored at a dinner Friday night, Feb. 3, held at the Lincoln School Cafeteria.

Glenn Coffey, Lincoln, was second with a yield of 154.72 bushels an acre. Third place honors went to Harry Eickhoff, Ionia, with 138.28 bushels an acre. Government estimates for all corn grown for grain in Missouri was 62 bushels an acre.

Other Benton County farmers that grew more than 100 bushels an acre were. V. H. Gregory, Warsaw, 137.17 bushels per acre; Murl Henderson, Warsaw, 134.99; Donald Aery, 133.68; Albert Schnakenberg, of Lincoln, 128.44; W. E. Browning, Ionia, 128.40; Chad Gregory, Warsaw, 126.20; Arthur Hagen, Cole Camp, 127.38; R. F. Gregory, Warsaw, 126.20; Martin Schnakenberg, Ionia, 123.18; Alfred Eckhoff, Lincoln, 123.14; Rudolf Hagen, Cole Camp, 122.43; Ronald Eickhoff, Ionia, 121.24; Edwin Schnakenberg, Cole Camp, 118.83; Charles Dick, Lincoln, 118.60; Raymond Gregory, Warsaw, 116.95; Gene Coffey, Lincoln, 116.60; Herman F. Heimsoth, Cole Camp, 111.32; Walter L. Kaiser, Cole Camp, 109.38; Oliver Wienberg, Ionia, 109.34; Erich H. Mueller, Lincoln, 108.18; A. A. Mahaken, Ionia, 106.07; Hubert Durham, Warsaw, 105.90; and John William Stuhner, Cole Camp, 100.03.

Other contestants with high yields are: Rudy Rambow, Cole Camp; Melvin Schnakenberg, Mora; Mehrens Brothers, Lincoln; Clayton Fisher, Edwards; Edward Bauer, Cole Camp; Olaf Heisterberg, Cole Camp; Leonard Howery, Ionia; Henry Lange, Jr., Cole Camp; Clarence Powell, Warsaw; Loren Arnett, Ionia; and Glenn Miesner, Ionia.

To get his county championship yield Henry Lange, Sr., planted his corn on May 3rd in 34 inch rows. He had 19,800 stalks to the acre. The field was limed in 1964. This spring he plowed down 400 pounds of 22-11-11 bulk fertilizer per acre. At time of planting he put 150 pounds of 8-22-11 with trace elements in the row for a starter fertilizer. Later he side dressed with 250 pounds of ammonium nitrate per acre. The varieties were 2151, 3232 and 2222. He used aldrin as soil insecticide. On May 12th he sprayed with 2,4D to control weeds.

Glenn Coffey planted his corn on May 5th in 38 inch rows. His stalk population was 19,533 per acre. The variety was 3232. He plowed under 500 pounds of 20-12-12 bulk fertilizer per acre. For starter put 100 pounds of 8-22-11 with trace elements in the row at the time of planting. He used aldrin as soil insecticide. On June 1st he sprayed with 2,4-D against weeds.

Harry Eickhoff planted his corn on May 7th in 38 inch rows. He had 17,233 stalks to the acre. The variety was 3232. He plowed down 500 pounds of 23-9-13 bulk fertilizer per acre. For a starter fertilizer h eput on 150 pounds of 10-25-16 bulk fertilizer per acre. He used aldrin at time of planting. On May 12th he sprayed with 2,4-D for weeds.

Kenneth Johnson of Trenton is the state's corn growing champion. He averaged 244.72 bushels an acre on a field in the Grand River bottom. To get his big yield he used a combination of a high stalk per acre, a generous application of fertilizer and chemical weed control and no cultivation.

Talk On Crime Alert

Epsilon Beta Chapter, Beta Sigma Phi, met at the home of Mrs. Barbara Blaschke on Monday, Jan. 23. Mrs. Judi Morarity, president, presided over the business meeting.

Plans were discussed for the Valentine Dance to be held on Feb. 18.

Mrs. Morarity introduced the guest speaker for the evening, Police Chief W. E. Miller, who gave a talk on the Crime Alert Program in Sedalia. He passed out pamphlets which listed to watch for and what to do as a citizen to make this "Crime Alert Program" a success.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Barbara Blaschke and Mr Arlene Behrend following the meeting.

R-V PTA Hears Talks On Mental Health

Dr. Carlos Muniz psychiatrist, and Ralph Bowers, psychiatric social worker, from the Mid-Missouri Mental Health Center in Columbia, were speakers at the Pettis County R-V Elementary PTA Unit meeting Monday night, Jan. 23, at the school. Every two weeks they come to Sedalia to hold a community Mental Health Clinic for the people of this area.

Dr. Muniz spoke on the emotional development of a child from the time it is born, telling some of the symptoms a child needing help might display that a teacher or parent should recognize.

He told, also, of the newer ways of treating adult patients in their own home and community rather than sending them away for treatment as previously only to return to the same stresses.

Bowers talked on the Community Mental Health Clinics and the fine line between mental health and mental sickness. He stressed the importance of using the health-giving resources of the community such as parents, teachers, school counselors, juvenile officers, scout leaders, ministers, medical doctors, employers and welfare workers.

A question and answer period followed.

The meeting was preided over by the president, Mrs. Eugene Rayl, with Mrs. Earl Gregory giving the devotional. Group singing was accompanied by Mrs. Earl Gregory at the piano.

The health committee reported the completion of weighing and measuring the grade school children.

Paul W. Stephens announced the possibility of a kindergarten being started this spring and asked parents of kindergarten age children to enroll the new students.

The speakers of the evening were introduced by Mrs. W. D. Schlomer, health committee chairman.

Refreshments were served in the cafeteria during the social hour that followed the meeting.

1926 Almanac Has Pictures Of Ice Storms

Mrs. Jim Houchen, Houstonia, brought to the Sedalia Democrat-Capital office an old copy of the North American Almanac, 926, in which are pictures of broken trees and wires encased in ice from the 1921 ice which might have been taken during the recent ice storm. That storm was in November, and there were pictures of another ice storm in December 1924.

Ice storms, the almanac said, occur when rain falls from a relatively warm layer of the atmosphere upon terrestrial objects cooled below the freezing point. The typical deposit is clear ice, though in some cases it is mixed with snow deposits.

The article, by Charles Fitzhugh Talman, stated the ice storm is a beautiful and expensive variety of weather which probably flourishes in greater perfection in North America than anywhere else in the world.

Whether its beauty is worth the expense is a question concerning which opinions may differ. Not the least of the hardships arisinp from such events is a nerve-rackinb labor imposed upon an army of repairmen, but it pointed out that the industries concerned have learned by experience how to mobilize their forces and resources for these emergencies and veritable miracles are wrought in rapid restoration of service.

And though the hours seemed endless to those suddenly without the modern way of life, electricity for heat, cooking and entertainment, as well as telephones once again the miracle was wrought in an amazing short period of time.

Cost Of TV Series Is 'Alarming'

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — There is more to the cancellation of a television series than an anemic rating. Economics can also play a crucial factor, as in the case of "Green Hornet."

The major film studios, which now produce the bulk of television series, are becoming more and more alarmed at the rising cost of putting a show on the air. Recently Darryl F. Zanuck, president of the biggest series maker, 20th Century-Fox, told me he was considering cutting down the number of shows made by the studio.

"We were making so many series we had to rent space at other studios," he explained. "When you do that, your possibility of profit becomes precarious."

Even with a hit, he added, the studio loses money on the first year's product. The second or third year could produce a profit. But some series never pay off until they go into reruns.

One of the Fox series is "Green Hornet," which can be classed as an iffy show. It has received fair ratings, but star Van Williams figures it will return next season only if the economics can be solved.

"Bill Dozier, our producer, has been trying to sell ABC and the sponsors on the idea of going to an hour show next season. It would make sense from the actors' standpoint. One of the problems with the show was that the network wanted half of it to be action. It meant dragging in action for actions' sake, and that was lousy. We were left with only 12 or 13 minutes of dialogue, and that wasn't enough to establish any of the characters or develop the plot," Williams said.

"But most important of all, a half-hour show is almost impossible to do on an economic basis. Our show is budgeted at $110,000, and I don't think we've met that mark in more than two or three of the 26 shows. I understand the loss to the company has been a million and a half dollars, some of which will be recovered on reruns.

Mars May Have Heart Of Pure Gold

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Men visiting Mars some day may find the mysterious red planet has a heart of cold.

A warm heart, or core—preferably of molten iron—is necessary if a planet is to form mountains, oceans, continents and an atmosphere, two scientists report.

But, says geophysicist D. L. Anderson of the California Institute of Technology and R.H. Phinney of Princeton University, Mars is really a cold fish at heart.

There's still hope of change, give or take a half billion years.

They said their calculations indicate Mars is an evolutionary slowpoke as planets go. Earth, they said, apparently developed from a cold solid body—like Mars—into a planet with a zoned interior and variable surface features.

Theory has it, they said in an interview, that the earth's molten core is the result of tremendous pressure from gravitational forces, the constant force creates enough heat to keep the core in a liquid state.

Geophysicists say that if Mars does have a molten core, it's a small one, partly because Mars, among planets, is no giant. It's only slightly more than half the size of earth.

Another theory has it that Mars may have a molten core, seated by radioactivity. Anderson and Phinney dispute this.

"Our calculations show," Anderson said, "that the interior temperatures of Mars are such that iron won't start melting in the center of the planet for another half billion years."

So what does all this mean?

Mars, they explained, may thus be considered a primitive model of the earth.

Pupils See Challenges In S-C Home Economics Study

By Becky Thomas

In the modern rooms of the Physical Education and Fine Arts Building is housed one of the most interesting departments at Smith - Cotton High School — the Home Economics Department. Approximately 400 girls, under the direction of Mrs. Mary Maddox, Mrs. Rosalie Smith, and Mrs. Linda Reed, bustle around gleaming white kitchens and operate modern sewing machines. The five principal areas of study are clothing, foods, home decoration, child care, and family relations.

All of these courses are designed to prepare girls to take their places in the home now and when they are established in their own homes.

Classes Challenge Girls

Clothing classes at Smith-Cotton are designed for girls with a special interest in sewing. Students come into the classes with a wide range of skills and experiences, but the utmost effort is made to challenge each girl. Therefore, individual projects vary a great deal.

The first project in these classes was a basic wool dress or suit. These were entered in the district "Make It Yourself With Wool Contest," held in Sedalia. Three girls from Sedalia, Sue McMullin, Linda Bryden and Connie Rhodes received honors for their wool garments.

Since Christmas the classes have been in a detailed study of textiles. They will make a field trip to a local fabric shop to become familiar with the different weaves and materials.

Other plans for the second semester include a child's garment, a spring dress, and remodeling project. Clothing made in these classes is exhibited in the showcase in the Physical Education Building and provides a colorful display throughout the school year.

Cindy Young, a senior in homemaking this year, explains her feelings about sewing this way: "An artist doesn't take any more pride in his work than a girl who completes her first wool dress. Sewing is the most satisfying pasttime I know."

Principles of Cookery

The main purpose of courses in cookery are learning nutrition (selecting foods wisely), shopping (buying economically), preparation (getting the most nourishment for one's money), and manners and social graces.

The advanced foods classes have been studying preparation and possibilities of different cuts of meat, and they are planning to visit a local store to study meat costs. The girls are also studying meal-planning on the three-meal-a-day plan. Other projects this year were baking their own breads and rolls and making jellies and jams. Before the Christmas holidays, the cooking room was filled with delicious aroma of cookies, candies, and fruit-cakes as the classes began their holiday cookery.

Beginning classes have had a busy schedule this year, studying nutrition and the preparation of foods, also based on the three-meal-a-day plan. They prepare simple meals, placing emphasis on the reasons for doing things and bringing out principles of cookery. Mrs. Maddox stresses home practice, asking each girl to repeat at home the lessons she has at school. Another important part of beginning foods is learning the use and care of the modern appliances in the kitchens. "One of the most important things you learn in Homemaking is working and getting along with others and doing your share of the work," explains Barbara Phillips, a freshman in the class.

The Family Relations class, made up of forty senior girls, studies each girl's place as a member of her family — what her family gives to her and what she owes to them. The girls study the problems of teenagers and how to meet them with open minds so that they will make wise decisions. The class will study budgeting, improving personality, religion, preparation for marriage, and child care. Family Relations is principally a discussion class that requires wide outside reading. Darlene Perkins, a senior, says, "The most enjoyable part of Home Economics, for me, is the class discussions, where we really let off steam."

Mrs. Steven Guy Ingram

Miss Teri Ann Bieri Weds Steven Ingram In California

Miss Teri Ann Bieri, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl W. T. Bieri, California, and Mr. Steven Guy Ingram, son of Mr. and and Mrs. Jarl Ingram, Lawrence, Kan., exchanged double ring vows of marriage at two o'clock Saturday atfernoon, Jan. 21 at the First Baptist Church in California.

The Rev. O V. Dodson, Nevada, solemnized before an altar decorated with brass spiral candelabra with an arrangement of pink gladioli and white chrysanthemums with cranberry velvet bows.

Mrs. Ronald Hymer, Bolivar, played nuptial selections preceding the ceremony and accompanied Miss Jane Buffington, Bolivar, as she sang, "Whither Thou Goest" and "The Wedding Prayer."

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor length gown of imported silk crepe. The bodice was fashioned with a Sabrina neckline and long sleeves tapering to points over the wrists. The skirt was designed with unpressed pleats in the back. The removeable sleeveless coat drifted into a wide chapel train. Small tailored bows accented the shoulders. The French illusion veil was held in place by a pillbox crown of silk with clusters of white silk roses and seed pearls. She carried a graceful cascade of white phalaenopsis orchids, white sweetheart roses and stephanotis. She wore a single strand of pearls, a gift from the bridegroom.

Miss Sandy Allee, California, was maid of honor. She wore a floor length dress styled with a pink skirt and an Empire waist and long tapered sleeves of pink lace. She carried a cascade bouquet of happiness sweetheart roses interspersed with pink feathered carnations.

Mrs. Fred Wildermuth, Nevada, was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Ginger Ingram, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Mary Ann Gooch, Appleton City. They wore identical dresses styled like that worn by the maid of honor. They carried bouquets of pink feathered carnations and deep Happiness red sweetheart roses trimmed with cranberry satin ribbon and camellia foliage.

Candlelighters were Mrs. John Wolf, Warrensburg, and Mrs. Harry Jester, Bolivar. Their dresses and headpieces were like those of the other attendants. They wore wrist corsages of pale pink feathered carnations and deep red happiness sweetheart roses.

Miss Sue Ann Hall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Hall, California, was flower girl. Her floor length dress featured a pink crepe skirt with yoke and puff sleeves of pink lace. She carried rose petals in a tiny white basket and wore a wrist corsage of sweetheart roses and feathered carnations.

Master David Allee, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Allee, carried the rings on a white satin pillow.

The bridegroom chose Mr. Keith Elmore, DeSota, as his best man. Groomsmen were Mr. Robert Zay, Mr. Charles Gerardy, Springfield, and Mr. Richard Fornelli, Lawrence, Kan. Serving as ushers were Mr. Harry Jester, Bolivar, Mr. John Blaylock, Mr. Chris Sechler, Springfield, and Mr. Jerry Robinett, Lebanon.

The mother of the bride chose a two piece green and blue brocade dress with black accessories. The groom's mother selected a cerise double knit suit with matching hat and black accessories. Each wore a white cattleya orchid corsage.

A reception was held following the ceremony in the church dining room. Mrs. Othor Allee was in charge, assisted by Miss Dianna Porter, Miss Raneta Ragsdale, Lebanon, Mrs. Gary McDowell, Bolivar, and Miss Carol Tooke, Piedmont.

The bride's table was covered with a lace tablecloth over pink and centered with a four-tiered wedding cake decorated with pink roses and white bells. A tiny arrangement of pink sweetheart roses and leatherleaf fern was used atop the cake. Roses and fern were also used to encircle the base of the cake.

Miss Shelba Knight, Owensville, and Miss Janice Allee, California, assisted at the gift table, which was also covered with a lace cloth over pink, centered with a pink wrapped package tied with a large cranberry velvet bow and streamers. White satin balls were arranged in and around the bow. Scented candles in cranberry and white glass containers completed the arrangment. Mrs. Kenny Hoefener, Latham, was in charge of the guest book.

The bride chose for traveling a lime green, two piece knit dress with black accessories. Her corsage was orchids taken from her bridal bouquet.

The bride is a graduate of the California High School and Southwest Baptist Junior College, Bolivar. She is presently a senior at Southwest Missouri State College, Springfield, majoring in elementary education. The groom is a graduate of Lawrence High School and Southwest Baptist Junior College. He is also a senior at Southwest Missouri State College, majoring in speech.

Following the wedding trip, the couple will reside in Springfield.

TO BE WED—Mr. Everett Paxson and Mrs. Geraldine Paxson, California, announce the engagement of their daughter, Marjorie Ann, to Mr. Don R. Medlen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Medlen, High Point. Miss Paxson is a 1966 graduate of the California High School and is attending Central Missouri State College, Warrensburg. Mr. Medlen is a 1965 graduate of the California High School and is also attending Central Missouri State. The wedding date has been set for June 3.

Marilyn McKee, Dale Reith United In Winter Wedding

Miss Marilyn Kay McKee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie McKee, Centertown, and Mr. Dale Preston Reith, son of Mr. and Mr. John A. Reith, Blackburn, were united in marriage at three o'clock Saturday afternoon, January 14 at the United Church of Christ, California.

The Rev. Marvin Kirchhoff performed the double ring ceremony before an altar decorated with lighted white candles, gold chrysanthemums and jade foliage. Flanking the altar were two candelabra holding white lighted tapers and a pair of potted bronze chrysanthemums.

Miss Nancy Rohrbach, California, played traditional wedding selections. She also accompanied Mrs. Leo Gentry, Sedalia, who sang, "One Hand One Heart" and "The Lord's Prayer."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor length gown of candlelight satin, styled with an Empire waist and trimmed with matching Alencon lace which followed the flare of the A-line skirt. The long tapered sleeves were buttoned at the wrists with tiny satin buttons. The flowing satin train fell from her shoulders. Her bouffant shoulder length veil was held by a crown of tiny pearls. She carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums with white rose buds and a lace handkerchief, which had been carried by her mother at her wedding. The bride fashioned her own gown.

The bride's sister, Miss Leslie Anne McKee, was maid of honor, and Miss Patty McKee, also a sister, was bridesmaid. Both attendants wore street length dresses of moss green wool with matching green shoes. Their triple bow hats were of gold mesh with matching tulle circles. They carried identical bouquets of large bronze chrysanthemums with trailing bronze pompons.

Mr. Jon Koenig, Kansas City, served as best man. Mr. Roger Steffens, Blackburn, was groomsman. Ushers were Mr. Leo Gentry, Sedalia, Mr. Clyde Miller, Blackburn ,and Mr. Larry Jensen, Ft. Leonard Wood. Mr. Robert McKee, brother of the bride, lighted the candles.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. McKee chose a navy blue knit two-piece dress with navy and white accessories. The mother of the bridegroom wore a three-piece double knit ensemble of mint green with matching accessories. Each wore a corsage of feathered bronze chrysanthemums.

The open Bible, flanked by crystal candelabra, centered the bride's table at the reception. The four-tiered wedding cake and punch were served by Mrs. Elwood Cook, Mrs. Merle Reischausen and Mrs. Clifford Wenfron, aunts of the bride. Miss Connie Brenton and Miss Joan Straufer were in charge of the gift table. Mrs. Robert Basinger and Mrs. Marvin Kirchhoff assisted generally.

Also attending the wedding were the bride's maternal grandmother, Mrs. Theo Albertin, the groom's maternal grandmother, Mrs. A. Brunkhorst, Blackburn, and Mrs. Clara Reith, the groom's paternal grandmother.

After a short wedding trip, the newlyweds will be at home in Kansas City.

Mrs. Reith is a graduate of the California High School and attended Central Missouri State College, Warrensburg. She is presently employed at Research Hospital, Kansas City. Mr. Reith is a graduate of Blackburn High School and Central Missouri State College. He is employed as assistant manager at the French Market in Overland Park, Kan.

Mr. and Mrs. John A. Reith, were hosts to a rehearsal dinner on Jan. 13 at the Masonic Temple dining room in California.

Collector Of Toys To Speak At Sorosis

Sorosis will have as its guest speaker on Monday, Feb. 6th, Jerry Smith of Kansas City. Mr. Smith, a businessman, is gaining attention in this area and across the nation for his outstanding collection of antique toys. This extensive collection has been the source for several specialized exhibits in Kansas City, New York and elsewhere. A television film has also been made of the toys. Any proceeds from such use of the toys goes into a trust fund for underprivileged children, with Mercy Hospital in Kansas City having been the recipient of a substantial sum.

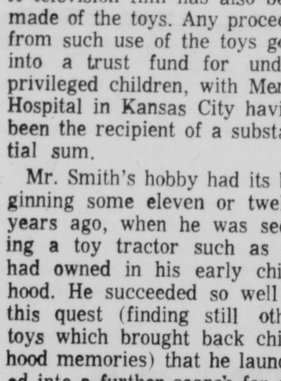

Mr. Smith's hobby had its beginning some eleven or twelve years ago, when he was seeking a toy tractor such as he had owned in his early childhood. He succeeded so well in this quest (finding still other toys which brought back childhood memories) that he launched into a further search for additional toys reminiscent of his farm home. The collection has grown from this small start to more than 2000 toys spanning a period from the Civil War era to the 1920's.

He has found pleasure in collecting these toys which reflect conditions in our nation through the years, and in restoring them as nearly as possible to their original condition. Now he is sharing his enjoyment with many groups who are eager to hear about his unusual hobby, as well as with individuals who have visited the toy displays.

The Missouri Motor Car Dealers' Association recently honored him by choosing him as its candidate for the Benjamin Franklin award given annually by the National Motor Car Dealers Association to a dealer who has achieved an outstanding record of community service.

Miss Marjorie Rector, history and literature chairman of Sorosis, will present the speaker at the meeting which begins at 2 p.m. The luncheon, previously announced, will not be held,

WASHINGTON (AP) — A presidential commission will submit its report on the nation's Selective Service System within two weeks, sources report.

President Johnson appointed the 20-member commission and asked it to report by Jan. 1. One official said the delay in finishing the project report came because "we've been looking over the issues pretty carefully."

Sources said the commission has ruled out any radical changes in the present draft system, but plans to recommend steps designed to reduce inequities.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A safety consultant has quit his government post because, he says, he cannot in "good conscience" support the Commerce Department's new auto safety standards.

"They will not contribute effectively to safety," William F. Stieglitz said of the standards issued by the department this week. "They were so weakened that I just couldn't in good conscience endorse them."

Stieglitz helped draft the department's original safety proposals last year. He submitted his resignation to Dr. William Haddon, traffic safety administrator, after the department issued the modified standards, which he termed "totally inadequate."

WASHINGTON (AP) — A leading industrialist says by 1985 all Americans could choose to work only 22 hours a week and still maintain present living standards.

Or everyone could work only 27 weeks a year — or all could retire at age 38, added Thomas J. Watson, board chairman of International Business Machines Corp.

Watson made the predictions Thursday night as he received an award from the American Business Press Inc., an organization of business publications, for his outstanding service to the country.

Fight To Save Art

FLORENCE, Italy (AP) — As the ordinary people of Florence strive for a normal life once more, a unique and agonizing battle is being waged in odd corners of the city — in museum basements, in the chill rooms of an ancient fortress, in a garden shed, in the boiler room of a heating plant.

The battle is to save the paintings, statues and books damaged by the Nov. 4 flood. The heroes are the experts armed with knowledge and the volunteers from many lands who have only willingness and a love for art.

Emerging as one of their biggest enemies is a mold that attacks damp paintings and stubbornly refuses to die. Officials fear it is becoming immune to fungicide used to wipe it from cherished masterpieces.

Most of the city seems unaware of how desperate and complicated the fight is or how long it will have to go on. Specialists and their volunteers work in conditions that range from painfully uncomfortable to physically dangerous.

The best informed estimates of how long it will take to complete what can be done range from 20 to 30 years.

The heroism began at the very start, when the waters of the Arno River receded. For weeks volunteer students, tourists and soldiers, standing hip-high in muck and wearing gas masks against the poisonous stench, groped in chill mud for paintings and books inundated in the basements of museums and libraries.

For each type of art the salvage problems were different, and for all they were difficult. Priceless paintings on wood swelled up like sponges. Soaked canvases went slack. Black fuel oil carried by the floods sank deep into the stone of statues. An estimated two million books, many with costly hand tooled leather bindings, were soaked into near pulp. Frescoes were stained and the supporting walls became impregnated with dampness.

In the midst of the general misery in the city, a terrible period of shortages and confusion crippled the salvage operation.

Workers trying to keep color from flaking off soaked paintings ran out of Japanese rice paper. Emergency calls for more went to Japan, England, the United States.

In the meantime they used almost anything they could put their hands on, including toilet and tissue paper.

Shipments of blotting paper arrived from abroad to help dry out books. It was discovered later that the paper was untreated with fungicide and though the pages interleaved with the paper dried, they fell victim to mold.

In the frantic atmosphere that sprang up as specialists rushed to apply first aid before it was too late, bickering broke out over materials and techniques.

For cleaning the oil-stained statues almost every specialist seemed to have his own type of solvent to recommend.

Various solvents were tried — including secret formulas rushed in by plane from England and Germany.

The experts were appalled when, after first application of solvents, some of the time-mellowed statues emerged from the washing glaringly clean.

Prof. Myron P. Gilmore, head of the Harvard Center of Renaissance Studies at Florence and director here of the American Committee for the Rescue of Italian Art, said: "The statues came out bright white. They looked like marzipan."

Subsequent washings appeared to have toned down the whiteness, but it may be years before many of the statues lose the sheen that makes them look like fresh plaster.

Much of the tension and trouble in the early stages was caused by the complexities of Italian customs regulations. Shipments of absorbent paper and dehumidifying equipment were caught up in the red tape of bureaucracy and held at customs houses while the specialists pleaded for them.

There was confusion abroad as well. Orders went to England for portable dehumidifiers. Air conditioners arrived instead.

The very willingness of the international art community caused a certain amount of confusion.

Highly qualified restorers rushed to Florence only to find that for most of them it was a wasted trip. They had come too soon. The damaged works first had to undergo months of drying before any actual restoration could begin.

An exception was Lawrence Majewski, head of the Department of Conservation of the New York Fine Arts Institute. At the recommendation of art authorities, Dr. Ugo Procacci, superintendent of Florence Galleries, invited Majewski to come. In art circles Majewski is regarded with special awe as an experts' expert.

He arrived 11 days after the flood, made a quick survey and planned an emergency first aid program.

He saved 16th century painted leather shields in the Bargello Museum by ransacking pharmacies for lanolin and neutral benzine solution, and rubbing the mixture into the ancient, water-soaked leathers.

Says Prof. Gilmore: "It was the best first aid possible."

First aid for the water-bloated paintings consisted of brushing absorbent paper on them with a resin solution to keep the color from cracking off. Then the paintings were laid out on chairs, to get a flow of air around them.

As this was done, teams of workmen labored around the clock for nearly two weeks to convert a 300-foot-long garden shed behind the Pitti Palace into a sealed "hospital" fitted with air heaters and blowers.

The crucial problem is to control the rate of drying because the ancient woods, the chalk base for the painting and the mastic or glue used to fix the base to the wood all expand at different temperatures. Random drying would crumble the masterpieces into so much colorful junk.

It took five U.S. Army trucks lent from the American NATO base at Vicenza, north of Florence, three days to gather the 300 wood paintings from museums, galleries and churches and bring them into the hospital.

As each painting arrived attendants dressed in white sprayed them with an anti-mold gas, placed them on racks covered with plastic sheets and inserted thermometers beside them.

The best known patient there is the Crucifixion painted by Cimabue. But the massive work, which weighs nearly 1,500 pounds, will never recover. Restorers say that with 80 per cent of its paint washed away it is now just a relic.

It s uncomfortable and unhealthy to work in the hospital. In the early stages the humidity rate was kept so high attendants fell ill.

For them the big nightmare is mold. Every day every painting is washed front and back with some kind of fungicide. But every morning the mold is back again.

Restorer Massimo Seroni calls the situation desperate. He said there are perhaps 30 to 40 types of mold to fight and that it was feared they might get used to the daily doses of fungicide and grow stronger.

Mold is also the horror of the handful of book experts flown to Florence by the British Museum to save the volumes of the National Library.

The head of the team is Roger Powell, of Petersfield, Hampshire, who at 70 is rated perhaps the world's foremost practitioner of what he wryly calls "the dying craft of hand bindery."

"I would say two million books were damaged," Powell explains. "The bindings of most are ruined for good. And a lot of books will never go back to libraries at all because the pages are stuck solid. Just throw them away, that's all you can do."

The first task was to get the books dried and this was done before Powell arrived. U.S. Army trucks carted books out to tobacco drying sheds and pottery kilns in the Tuscan countryside.

When Powell came he set up headquarters in the huge but bone-chilling rooms of the Belvedere fort, a Medici stronghold overlooking the city.

There, working 12 hours a day with a few assistants, he goes through book after book, marking those that need prompt attention, discarding the hopeless volumes, putting aside the books that can wait.

In a room upstairs his wife and 16 volunteer students cut away soggy bindings and meticulously take books apart, a section at a time, to prepare them for washing.

Across the river on the edge of downtown Florence, Dorothy Cumpstey, who teaches book binding at St. Mary's College in Bangor, North Wales, supervises a primitive washing and drying operation set up among the roaring boilers and hot pipes of the heating plant for the railroad station.

It was the only place immediately after the flood with warm running water. Here, as engineers move among them to check meters and gauges, more than 50 volunteers — mainly American and English students — sit in the stifling heat under naked light bulbs and gently pass books a page at a time through improvised troughs running with tepid water.

Forensic Squad Places Fourth At Hickman

The Smith-Cotton Forensic Squad, under the direction of Dan B. Curtis, sponsor of drama and debate at Smith-Cotton, placed fourth in sweepstakes rankings at the Hickman High School Forensic Tournament which was held in Columbia, on Jan. 27 and 28.

The debate team of Terry Winebrenner and Craig Cassing, both seniors, went undefeated through five rounds of debate and were defeated in quarter-finals by Central High School of Springfield. The team of Tracy Strombom and Jack Austin won four of their five rounds of debate and were eliminated from quarter-finals due to speaker points.

Jill Hopkins, senior, placed third in humorous interpretation by preforming the very entertaining skit entitled "The Great Society." Lloyd Knox, senior, qualified for finals in extemporaneous speaking but failed to place with the other eight finalists.

Quite a large number of schools were in attendance despite the poor weather with the following schools participating: Fulton High, Fulton; Missouri University Lab School, Columbia; Jefferson City High, Jefferson City; and Central High, Springfield.

Deep Study Occupies 15-Year-Old

NEW YORK (AP) — Frank Wilczek, at 15, is a quiet scholar who prefers astrophysics to dates. He's one of 10 finalists in the annual Westinghouse Scientific Talent Search.

While most teen-agers are having fun on the weekends, Frank is engrossed in astrophysics, mathematics and philosophy. He relaxes by listening to classical records, his favorite pastime.

"Once in a whaile I go to an occasional party," he says. "I'm tied up every Saturday taking courses in mathematics and astrophysics in Columbia University's science honors program."

Frank will be 16 years old on May 15 and a few weeks later will be graduated from Martin Van Buren High School in Queens. He is graduating at such a young age because he skipped the third and eighth grades.

"I hope to attend the University of Chicago and study mathematics and physics," he says. "They both are interesting rather than both being related."

While being a long-hair record collector, Frank doesn't wear his hair long like many young people.

"It's silly," he says, "and it's silly to object. I'm completely indifferent."

The mod style of dress, he says, is "Horrible. A fad they're trying to put over."

Frank is 5 feet 7½ inches tall and weighs 150 pounds. His talent search project that will take him into the finals in Washington in March was an attempt to relate semigroups and groups in the field of algebra.

"I got really involved in mathematics," he says, "due to a certain teacher I had in my sophomore year. He got me very interested in it. I really don't know how I picked philosophy up."

Frank says he spends one or two hours on his school work at home each night.

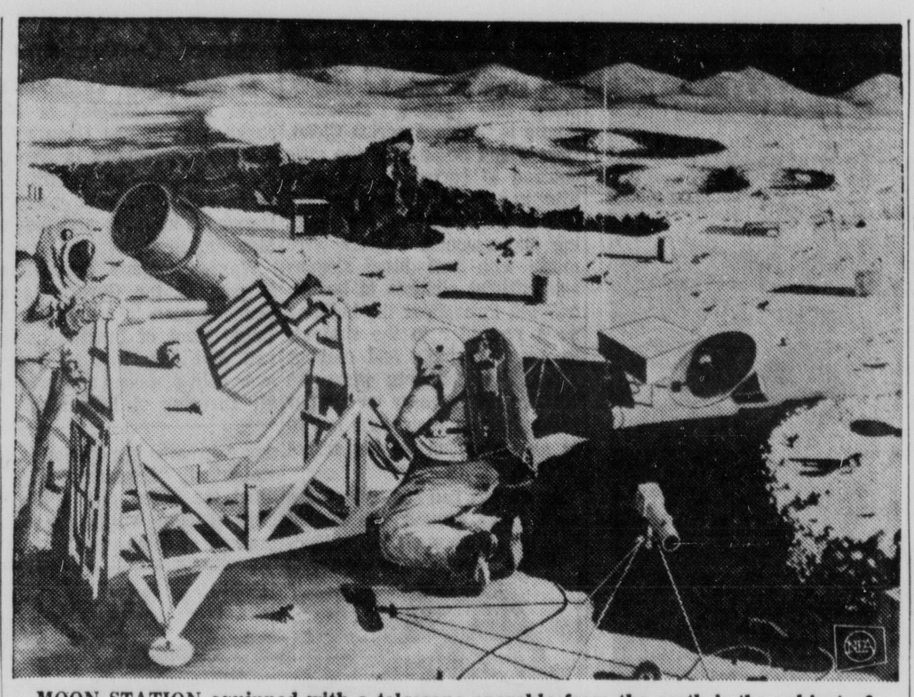

"I do things independently," he says. "I read on my own in mathematics and philosophy. I take up topics I'm interested in."

His father, Frank J. Wilczek, is in the electronics field, in research and development. Frank has one brother, 10.

Philosophizing about his generation of teen-agers, Frank says "juvenile delinquents are amoral .They are a very small number."

"In general," he adds, "you can't specify this high school generation as better or worse than any other. The generalization of such a large number of people, I don't think can be valid.

"I think it's excellent that students are finally speaking up on things that concern them, things like the free speech movement. I think it was a very good effort. When it turned to filthy speech, I lost my sympathy for it, but I think the original goals and efforts were fine."

MOON STATION equipped with a telescope operable from the earth is the subject of a study being done by Westinghouse Electric Corporation, funded by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. The artist's sketch shows future astronauts installing a "Mt. Palomar on the Moon," offering such advantages for space observances as a stable platform, cool even temperature, and absence of the dense atmosphere that earth-bound telescopes must penetrate.

Circulation of Books Increased At Library

Donald G. Morton, librarian at the Sedalia Public Library, reported circulation of books during 1966 increased slightly over the previous year and highlighted his report with news of a bequest from the Marian S. West estate for the purchase of children's books.

Concerning the bequest, Morton said so far 175 new titles have been added to the library's collection and that an additional 75 are on order. The works cover areas of fiction and non-fiction, he said.

He said funds from the bequest have helped the library "update and up-grade that section to keep pace with the accelerated request of younger students."

"The reading horizons of even elementary school children have expanded greatly in the past ten years, and it is essential that the library keep up with the demand. That is why we are so appreciative of this bequest," Morton added.

Morton said 91,981 books were issued through the public library's outlet last year. He said no reference material obtained last year included the latest edition of Colliers Encyclopedia and the Random House Dictionary of the English Language.

Cub Scout Notes

"Highways to History" was the theme for the Cub Pack 66, monthly pack meeting held at the First Christian Church. The Scouts and their parents followed a "make believe" cattle trail to Sedalia doing the "Cub Scout style" some of the activities the early pioneers had encountered.

The opening flag ceremony was conducted by Den 4, with David Cusick and Bill Barrick as flag bearers. Den 4, with Mrs. James Braden and Mrs. Albert Cusick, den mothers, were the winners of the attendance trophy.

Skits were presented by Den 4 on "How Dance Came to the Indians." Den 3 and Den 1 presented the "Wonderful Time Machine" and Den 2, "Highways to the Old West."

Cub master James Penn presented the following badges: Bear badge, Gold and Silver Arrow, Douglas Frisbie; Denner Stripes, Nolan Simon, David Cusick and Robert Campbell; Assistant Denner Stripes, Don Smith, Bill Barrick and Barry Deuel ; 1 year pins, Robert Campbell, Bobby Johnston, Jeff Shoemaker, Jamie Penn, Mrs. Robert Johnston and Mrs. James Penn; Wolf Badge, Charles Braden, Jim Morrow, Kyle Doty, Gold Arrow, Jim Morrow.

The meeting closed with Don Broaddus singing "God Bless America."

The next pack meeting will be the annual Blue and Gold Banquet to be held Feb. 27.

Body Odor Secret To Man's Success

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Man has a distinctive body odor and taste, an anthropologist says, and that has been the secret of his success at survival.

Man stayed alive for millions of years, while other animals fell prey to hungry carnivores because, says Dr. Louis S.B. Leakey, a noted anthropologist and paleontologist, man's smell and taste literally turns the stomachs of predatory animals.

"Nature endowed us, like the shrews, with something of either a nasty taste or smell," he said in a speech Wednesday at the Academy of Natural Sciences.

While this natural defense system became "obsolete" about two million years ago when primitive man learned how to use weapons, it kept him alive while his cousins died for at least 19 million years before then, Leakey said.

Leakey said he came to this conclusion by observing chimpanzees and baboons.

He said leopards and other predatory cats steal baboon babies "nearly every night," while leaving the chimps — man's distant cousins — alone.

"Man is not cat food. The chimps aren't cat food either," Leakey said.

Leakey, 63, is on a six-week visit to this country, where he will address medical and scientific meetings in New York, Chicago, Boulder, Colo., and San Francisco, before returning to his work in Olduval Gorge, Tanzania.

Hubbard PTA Views Film On Dropouts

The Hubbard School PTA met on Monday, Jan. 16, at 8 p.m. with Mrs. Zula Wright, president, presiding. The devotion was given by Mrs. Flora Whitley.

Mrs. Dorothy Kitchen, membership chairman reported a total of 67 members. Mrs. Wright gave a report of the Jan. 4 Council meeting. The next Council meeting will be Feb. 2 at Mark Twain School. Mrs. Bennie Carter gave the financial report for room mothers.

Founders Day will be observed at Hubbard School Feb. 20. Mrs. Kathryn Rayford is chairman.

The special feature of the evening was a report on "Facts and Figures on School Drop out" by vice-principal Harry Browder. The report was concluded with a filmstrip, "Dropping Out Road to Nowhere."

ing or is currently enrolled in the course. The club has about fifty members and has been state and nationally affiliated since 1946. One of the highlights of this year was the regional meeting held in Warrensburg last October. At this time the Future Homemakers toured a management house where the college students live and do cooperative cookery. The tour was conducted by Suzanne Simms Franklin, who is a former S-C Future Homemaker now majoring in Homemaking at Central Missouri State College.

The Smith-Cotton Chapter of Future Homemakers of America has recently completed the annual state project for 1966-67. Since this year's statewide theme is "Keep America Clean, Green, and Beautiful," the girls decided to carry on an anti-litter campaign within the school to aid in beautifying the building and grounds. Posters were made with anti-litter slogans and colorful pictures to be distributed throughout the building as a reminder to the students to keep the halls and campus clean. The members were also encouraged to carry on similar campaigns in their own homes as an extension to the school project.

As anyone can see, things are very lively around the Homemaking Department. Mrs. Maddox expresses her opinion in the statement, "Homemaking is a must for every girl, since the girls of today will be the homemakers of tomorrow."

Named Corrections Deputy In Nebraska

Maurice Sigler, warden of the State Penal Complex of Nebraska, was named Deputy Director of Corrections in Nebraska by Gov. Tiemann. Mrs. Sigler is a sister of Mrs. James P. Higgins, LaMonte; and the late Malcolm Scott.

Warden Sigler's appointment is part of the Governor's announced plan to reorganize the Department of Institutions into two divisions, with a director over both divisions and an overall Director of Institutions.

The appointment will not be in effect until Gov Tiemann names the overall head. As Director for Corrections, Sigler would be in charge of correctional institutions at Lincoln, Kearney, York and Geneva, Neb.

Honesty Does Not Follow Declaration Of Intention

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Jumping to conclusions:

Anyone who begins a sentence, "To be absolutely honest with you," isn't going to be absolutely honest with you.

Teen-agers have more fun shopping at the jewelry counter in a dime store than dowagers do in Tiffany's or Cartier's.

A successful street beggar in Manhattan can earn as much as a headwaiter — and doesn't have to fawn as much on his patrons.

No matter how frumpish a brunette or a redhead can get, they never look quite as frowzy as a frowzy blonde.

These are times when the new quarters don't feel as sincere as an old buffalo nickel.

Not even a detective can spot a guy from out of town quicker than the fellows who sell bus tours of the city.

Maybe I'm sinking socially, but it has been more than five years since I've seen a lady looking at the world through a lifted lorgnette.

Irish girls have the loveliest complexions in the Western world, Vietnamese girls the fairest in the East. Australian girls are the world's best sports — real pal gals. But if you want a long, deeply troubled love affair, you can't do better than lose your heart to a girl reared in Hungary who has a Russian father and a French mother.

Executives whose main form of exercise consists of climbing into their swivel chairs unaided every morning have more hernia operations than bricklayers or professional football players.

I used to think no one could possibly have a more inflated ego than the average movie star. Then I met an author.

The worst curse about being a politician is that it is unsafe to be rude to anybody.

I'll begin to think there is some poetic justice in the world the day I see a tuna fish having a housewife for lunch — between two pieces of thinly sliced bread.

You rarely hear a guy with false teeth extol the virtues of the bagel.

The fellow who spreads the most head colds around the office in winter is the one who usually comes to work swaddled in a heavy muffler. He never gets rid of the virus — he just incubates it.

Girls over 30 who wear ribbon bows in their hair get very few marriage proposals.

One of the mysteries of nature is why so many skinny women have bigger feet than fat women.

You'll always have a better time at a cocktail party if you avoid getting into a conversation with the first girl who takes off her shoes. She's bound to turn out to be the worst exhibitionist in the place.

Stage 67 Provided Merry Hour

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP TV-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It would indeed be quite a night out on any town if it included watching Peter Sellers in two very funny sketches, Sir Laurence Olivier in a song-and-dance bit from "The Entertainer," and Albert Finney in a scene from "Luther."

But television viewers of the Thursday night's "David Frost's Night Out in London" on ABC had even more diversion — a few acts, none really distinguished, in London night spots and some humorous commentary between times from the host himself. Color film of the British capital by night was a treat to the eye.

Peter Sellers came off with the evening comedy honors in a hilarious sketch in which he portrayed an uncomfortable television interviewer unexpectedly confronted by a taciturn insurance salesman when he had expected a deep-sea diver. He was also amusing playing a wine-snob going through the rituals of sniffing and sipping and then unable to make any sort of an identification.

The "Stage 67" show as an amusing hodge-podge of short variety sequences stitched together with imagination and interesting change of pace. It provided a merry hour.

"Ironside," one of those made for television feature movies, stars Raymond (Perry Mason Burr as a detective, who solves his cases in spite of being confined to a wheelchair. Like so many others of the same type in NBC's "World Premier" series, the feature is also being used for a pilot to demonstrate an hour-long weekly series.

ABC has announced that the annual "Oscar" awards show of the film industry will arrive on April 10 with Bob Hope, as usual, in charge of things.

MAN HITS BALL IS NOT NEWS but when ball explodes in a shower of flame and sparks it's a sequence in television's Lost in Space. Here, Don Matheson connects with the ball, and the pyrotechnics obscure his swinging bat. Alarmed is Matheson's companion, Dee Hartford, in silver tights and silver sequin eyelids.

Moniteau Countians Attend Meeting

Several Moniteau Countians attended the first of this winter's series of district meetings sponsored jointly by the Missouri Soil Fertility and Plant Nutrition Council and University Extension Division.

Attending the Jan. 30th meeting were: Glenn Jobe, Earl Barry, Chuck Barry, Stanley Dummehmuth, Dan Oligschlaeger, Gilford Heidbreder and Bill Riley. Total attendance at the meeting was 110 farmers, fertilizer dealers, and related personnel. This was the largest crowd of any such meeting held over the past several years by these groups.

The program included a panel of three Cole County farmers on, "What I Expect of my Fertilizer Dealer", and a discussion of "Forage Potential of Missouri" by Alva Preston, Soils Specialist, University of Missouri.

Many would agree that pastures are perhaps the most neglected area of agriculture. Although Missouri has approximately 12 million acres of cropland it also has 3 million devoted to hay and 10 million to pasture.

The group were dinner guests of Adrain Materials, Jefferson City.

Age 60 and Ready to Burst

We've reached that point of age when mention of anything that happened a half century or more ago in Sedalia attracts more of our attention than comments about stabilizing mini skirts in London.

That's why an item of news last week was of such personal interest when it called attention to the fact that the lone feeder line from the waterworks to the city was 60 years old.

We missed watching them laying the line in 1907 because that was the year we moved from the house on the southwest corner of Broadway and Moniteau to the northeast corner of Third and Grand avenue. It was a busy time at home, and less time for trudging to Flat Creek — I was 10 and Kelly was 2.

Our Boy Scout days encompassed many week ends in territory around the waterworks, the Old Covered Bridge, the swimming hole at the dam below on Flat Creek, Thatcher's and Grand avenue fords.

Sixty years ago is a long, long time and it's a wonder that old pipe line has held up this long. Some sewer pipes around our home place today are paper thin, the plumber tells us. You can stick your finger right through the pipe in some spots.

— o —

Herbert Taylor, manager of the water department, and the Public Works board both have a right to be uneasy about the possibility of an old, single feeder line from the waterworks springing a massive leak or two and putting Sedalia's water supply in temporary jeopardy. So if a growing community's subdivisions want water piped in, the board has to deny this because of the risk involved to the community at large.

Water department officials, cognizant of this condition, have taken steps to rectify it by applying for a grant of $165,400 from the Department of Housing and Urban Development. With that and other funds locally available, then laying of a second feeder line can be started.

Sedalia must not be dependent much longer on one feeder line 60 years old. Therefore the Department of Housing and Urban Development must be encouraged to accelerate the application for a grant if that is what it takes to get the job done.

Government departments of all sorts do not have a reputation for rapidity in processing applications. We have had five communications relating to a $25 claim on Medicare. Four months have passed and no sign of a reimbursement for this single claim, although others have been paid. It's the red tape unwinding.

— o —

But a similar delay should not happen to the water department's grant.

If that 60 year old cast iron water main bursts there's going to be a lot of moaning around here which will be heard all the way to Washington or wherever this application rests — presumably at the bottom of a spike full of other applications.

Looking Backward

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

Auxiliary police badges have been received by Pettis County Post 16 of the American Legion and were issued this week to all members of the local auxiliary police forces. The badges are gold, with the Legion emblem centered and surmounted by the American eagle. Twenty-four dark blue shirts have been ordered for the force.

FORTY YEARS AGO

The annual election of officers of the Women's Christian Temperance Union was held at the Y. M. C. A. and the following chosen: President, Mrs. A. R. Gehle; Vice-President, Mrs. W. O. Stanley; Recording Secretary, Mrs. G. A. Miller.

—1927—

An indictment a day for the 21 days it was in session is the record of the Pettis County grand jury which convened on the opening day of the January term of Circuit Court and adjourned Saturday to reconvene March 28.

TV Offers Challenge

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration reports that it repaired a satellite using an "electronic screwdriver" with a handle 252,900 miles long.

As close as we can understand it, the touble developed with Explorer 33, launched last July, was something like a short circuit. Engineers sent a power surge through the spacecraft's electronic system, which cured the problem.

We're impressed. We'll be even more impressed when some of this know-how comes down to earth. If engineers can fix a satellite that's nearly 300,000 miles out in space, there's hope that someday we'll find a repairman who can treat an ailing television set on the spot and not say, "Sorry, I'll have to take this into the shop."

Tow-Away Crisis Disrupts the U. N.

DREW PEARSON
and JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — U.N. Diplomats are not nearly as worried over the war in Vietnam as they are about the great tow-away controversy. Some have even threatened to break diplomatic relations and move the United Nations out of New York City, over the indignity of having their limousines hauled away for parking violations.

A confidential survey, conducted by pollster Lou Harris, forewarned of trouble weeks before Mayor John Lindsay, in a desperate effort to clear up New York city's paralyzed traffic, ordered the police to tow away illegally parked cars.

At first, Lindsay gave no quarter to diplomats, who are accustomed to immunity from parking regulations. But this action virtually caused an international incident, finally compelling him to modify his stand slightly.

Before the Mayor's crackdown, Harris's interviewers asked 138 U.N. diplomats from Algeria to Zambia how they liked New York city. Though four out of five spoke favorably of the city, citing its cultural and cosmopolitan advantages, most also had some sour comments. Foremost was the parking problem.

In his confidential report, Harris spelled out the problems of the individual diplomat: "As a foreigner, he often has a language barrier. As a diplomat, he sometimes suffers prejudice against some of his legal privileges. As an African or Asian he often finds himself in a hostile society — not by choice, but because it is his job.

Housiug andTaxes

"When obtaining housing, a problem for any New Yorker at best, the diplomat is encumbered with his legal immunity and the fact that he is subject to transfer on short notice. Thus landlords are wary and ask for larger security deposits. Diplomats have difficulty getting the tax exemption that is lawfully theirs. They have parking problems. They face a vindictive daily newspaper.

"Many of these problems the diplomats simply does not have to face in other cities around the world. In most cities, including Washington, D.C., there is a diplomatic clause in leases which stipulates that upon proof of transfer, plus one month's rent, the lease becomes void. The diplomats want this clause in New York.

"In other cities, the diplomat simply shows his identification and he is exempt from taxes. In other cities, the diplomat is not threatened with a tow-away. If other cities can get along with diplomats, why not New York?"

N. Y. News Campaign

Two out of three diplomats, Harris found, have had parking problems. Harris blames this upon "an intensive negative publicity campaign on the part of one particular newspaper in New York." This is a reference to the New York Daily News which has stirred up "real public ferment of this issue," causing "a major problem for diplomats."

Harris quoted an African diplomat as complaining: "Often before I arrive, someone else has taken my parking space. Frequenly I am forced to double park because my space has been taken."

An European diplomat added: "Parking privileges are a reciprocal thing all over the world."

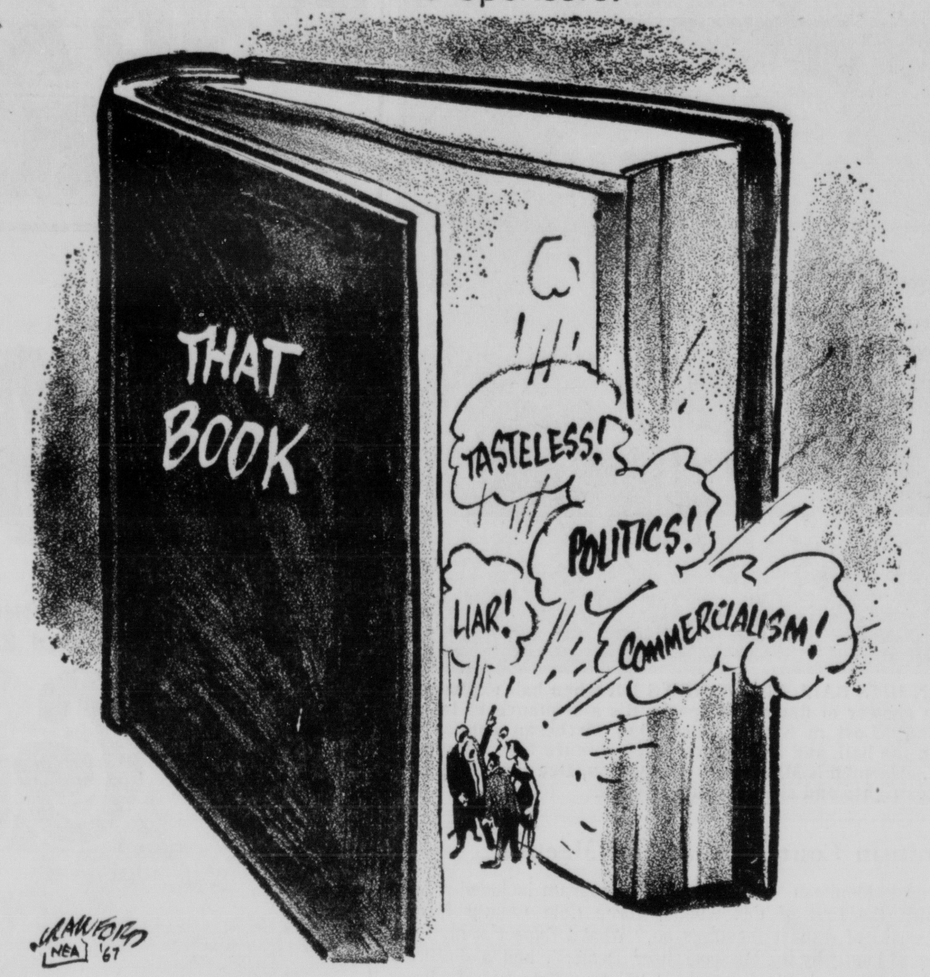

Concluded the confidential Harris report: "Arrogance on the part of diplomats certainly cannot be justified. Nor, on the other hand, can the situation tolerate continuing newspaper harassment and anything less than full sensitivity and understanding on the part of the police department and the city administration.

"It is inconceivable that the city would consider punitive solutions. It would break the protocol of international courtesy offered foreign diplomats. The repercussions would be worldwide and a great deal more damaging to United States diplomats than any other single group."

Harris points out: "Having the headquarters of the United Nations located in Manhattan benefits New York city immeasurably. It adds to the cosmopolitan nature of the city, is a major tourist attraction and, in hard cash, is a significant factor in the economic base of the city."

Ambassador Arthur Goldberg is quietly seeking a truce in the cold war between the United Nations and New York City.

Turn Signal's Flashing An Added Precaution

By POLLY CRAMER
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Polly

DEAR POLLY — When parking one's car and pulling on the emergency brake, flip the lever for one of the turn signals. When you return to the car and turn on the motor, the flashing of the turn signal indicator is a reminder that the emergency brake is on. Doing this a few times soon makes it a habit. There was a time when I used to start driving with the emergency brake on most of the time but this cured me. — L. V. H.

DEAR POLLY — Tell Barbara to get a bathroom towel bar and fasten it to the back of a bedroom door or inside of a closet door to hold her bedspread at night. She might even go a step further and wrap a towel around the bar, sewing the loose ends together or she could take the cardboard rolls from paper towels, slit them lengthwise and slip over the bar. This would prevent a crease in the spread caused by the rod.— MRS. L. D.

DEAR POLLY — Faced with the same situation as Barbara I obtained a heavy cardboard tube from a carpet store, cut it to the width of my bed and then placed it at the headboard and rolled the spread to the bottom. This rolled spread could be placed on a chest, bench or an opened dresser drawer at night. In the morning simply roll the spread on the bed and leave the tube at the top under the pillows. It will be out of sight, covered with the pillows, and the spread will be neat and tidy. The tube also helps one to roll pillows into a bolster shape. — PAT B.

DEAR POLLY — I solved the wrinkled breadspread problem by folding my spread in half the long way and hanging it over the top of the closet door at night. If the spread wrinkles easily, a twisted roll of tissue paper can be inserted in the fold at the place that touches the top of the door. I keep a child's small step stool in the closet. This not only makes it easier to hang my spread but enables me to reach things on the top shelf. Many thanks to you and all the gals who have eased some of the burden for this nine-member family — BETTE

The Master Decorator

The master decorator
Touched the great outside,
Then must have looked down upon
His wonderous work with pride;
The wall to wall carpet
He spread over all
I'm not exactly certain
How far each way the wall,
The carpet was white velvet
With glitter scattered o'er,
With pile so thick we sank in deep
Right down to the earth floor;
He made bright fringe along the wires,
Some places 'twas in tiers,
And sparking prisms on the trees
Turned them to chandeliers;
Of course He broke some tree tops out
And tangled up the wire,
Made some folks hunt for candles
And wish for good wood fires,
Ah, yes, things really got messed up
As tree limbs began to fall,
But when we try to decorate
That happens to us all,
Yet, when at last it was complete
And over was the night
He turned on the morning sun
To an awe-inspiring sight.

Opening lead—♣ J

With today's hand we take leave of the 1966 American team trials, concluding with the silliest hand of the event.

At four of the five tables South opened with a preemptive bid of three hearts. West could not find a bid and East would have liked to double but there was no hope that his partner would leave the double in.

There was little to the play. West would open the jack of clubs. East would win and cash his ace of trumps. Eventually the defense would wind up with three clubs, one spade, one diamond and four trumps. South would be down five for minus 250 but he would be happy about the whole thing.

East and West can make game in no-trump, spades or clubs. They can actually make six clubs by playing exactly one round of trumps but that sort of play is likely only if you are playing with all hands exposed.

As we said, North and South were happy until the results came in. At the one table where Souht failed to preempt North opened with three diamonds.

This three diamond opening was East's cup of tea. He had a fine take-out double and proceeded to make it.

West liked his hand and made a forcing bid of four diamonds. East bid four hearts and West went to five clubs. East really should have passed but he felt sure that his partner held four spades. Otherwise West would just have bid five clubs directly over the double. So East went to five spades.

Five spades was a reasonable contract but there was no way that East could handle North's four spades and he had to go down one trick.

Thus we had four North-South pairs at minus 250 and one at plus 100 so that minus 250 was a two IMP loss instead of a gain.

Senegal: New Nation

(Editor's Note: Mrs. Cyrene Dear is on a newspaper study mission to Africa with the National Newspaper Association.)

BY CYRENE DEAR

DAKAR, SENEGAL—Minister of the Senegal Foreign Office Doudou Thiam, meeting with members of the National Newspaper Association, said that the greatest problem in this new republic is economic development. It is the same old story of poor nations not being paid enough for their goods and paying too much for their imports.

Senegal is a small, poor country about the size of South Dakota with a population comparable to Chicago. Most of the people live in rural areas except for the growing metropolis of Dakar, the larget city in West Africa. There are only two seasons here. Although we are now in the dry season, the ocean breezes are cooling and refreshing.

Senegal's chief products are peanuts and millet. The peanuts are exported mostly to France, but when the embassy personnel want good, crunchy peanut butter they get it from the States. A strange breed of cattle, a Brahman hybrid, roams the flatlands, but the productive use of these animals is relatively low.

The African people are very colorful. Most of the tribal people are short and stocky with broad noses. An exception to this is the Wolof tribe, whose members are tall and statuesque with long, straight noses. Their teeth are amazingly white, aittributed by some of the licorice wood stick that they chew. It is little wonder that African print materials have become high fashion in the States and elsewhere because they are unusual and intricate. The women wear layers of material flowing loosely from their shoulders. However, they are cool because the air circulates through their clothing as they walk along with stately posture, baskets on their heads and babies tied to their backs. They wear heavy silver bracelets and their mutilated ears, with a variety of earrings, are a status symbol. The turbans on their heads often match the material in their gowns.

Senegal is feeling all the growing pains of a new nation. She is very conscious of her position in the United Nations. Like the other African nations, she is anxious to define her problems in a world organization. Rather than be identified as East or West, Senegal, with other developing countries, decided to form a third group to present a peaceful, unbiased opinion in the U.N.

The foreign minister discussed the idea of a federation of African states, but he felt that the first step was to form regional groups in the North, East, South and West. He said that the Senegalese government had no ambition to become a leader of West Africa.

Mr. Thiam gave his opinion on Vietnam: "I would have preferred that the United States would have consulted the rest of the world before starting the war in Vietnam. The situation there should be resolved by the Vietnamese themselves. If the two Vietnamese divisions continue to be dependent upon foreign powers, they should revert to the Geneva agreements. There can be no negotiations unless the National Liberation Party is included. The problems in Southeast Asia cannot be settled without recognizing Communist China."

The foreign minister spoke the policy of his government in the absence of President Le'opold Sedar Senghor, who was at his private estate preparing the speech he is soon to deliver in Cairo. The President is a highly educated French African, widely recognized as a poet, scholar and statesman. He is popular but still very pro-French, and some of the Senegalese intellectuals are eager to break away from French influence. But most of the aid comes from France and it is hard to bite the hand that feeds. The children go to French schools and French teachers are predominate in the universities.

About 80 percent of the Sengalese are Moslem. A beautiful new mosque was recently dedicated by King Hassen of Morocco. There is a Catholic cathedral in Dakar and a small Protestant church.

One of the tragedies of Senegal is that, according to a U.S. Medical official in Dakar, 50 percent of the native children die before the age of five from malnutrition, measles and a rare blood disease that so far has not been diagnosed. Leprosy is very common, but the victims are being isolated and treated.

The American Colony is not very large here. The officials, cognizant of the strong French background and careful about projecting the American image too much, are working quietly for the best interests of both countries.

The Peace Corps is headed by a Boston Negro, Mr. Carrington. He is a Harvard graduate who is concentrating on social work volunteers, teachers and technicians. The demand for teachers who have learned tribal languages and who can teach English is very great. The headquarters are in Dakar, but about 90 workers live in the villages in very primitive conditions. A few volunteers were present at the meeting with Director Carrington and were typical examples of the finest young Americans — clean cut, enthusiastic, intelligent and optimistic. Mr. Carrington admitted that there were many problems of frustration, health and discouragement, but on the whole the Peace Corps in Africa is popular and successful.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

The Poet Laureate of England is the official poet of His Majesty's Court. He is responsible for producing appropriate verses for noted state occasions, says The World Almanac. Although no authentic record exists as to its origin, the post is known to have been held by Geoffrey Chaucer (1340-1400) who received a small pension and a yearly allowance of wine for his work. William Wordsworth and Alfred Tennyson were also Poets Laureate. Since 1930, the post has been held by John Masefield.

Ann Landers

Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: I am writing about the most useless bit of advice any counselor ever handed out. Please, Ann, put an end to the phony idea that the way to get along with a fellow is to learn about his special interests and participate with him.

I fell for this applesauce and it just about wrecked me.

I started to go with Jack. He was nutty over drag racing. I decided to learn all I could about drag racing so I could be part of his life. I spent hundreds of boring hours watching drag races. I met dozens of girls who were also bored, but they were there for the same reason—to please a boy friend.

I went to one drag party after another and watched a bunch of creeps make fools of themselves. Finally I decided to stop knocking myself out for the jerk. Now I'm going with a fine fellow whose interests are more like mine—which is the way it ought to be. We enjoy music and art and hiking and just talking. When I think of the time and energy I wasted on the drag nut I could kick myself from here to China.—ASHAMED TO SIGN

Dear Ashamed: Rewarding relationships are based on what people can share. Similarity of interests is an ideal starting point. If a girl finds herself bored to death and faking enthusiasm for her boy friend's hobbies she'd better unload him or she could spend the rest of her life faking it—and this is the hardest work of all.

Dear Ann Landers: I have a big problem. He is my "little brother." Brother is about 40 pounds overweight and he eats enough to keep everybody in India alive.

He steals my personal mail, takes money out of my purse, and Mom can't even keep change in the sugar bowl because of this thieving kid.

He is in the slow class at school and still he is flunking. The teachers say he just sits there like a blob and doesn't even try to concentrate. Please don't tell me he need love because all his life he has received so much attention that he is spoiled rotten. My parents dote on him and he manages to get his own way and win every argument.

I have tried to tell Brother he'd better shape up or his life will be ruined. He says, "Take care of your own life and don't nag me."

What can I do?—WORRIED SWEET SIXTEEN

Dear Worried Sixteen: The only thing you can do is urge your parents to see that Brother gets professional help. He is a goner unless somebody gets in there and fast. Overeating, stealing and flunking are all symptoms of your brother's illness.

Your letter indicates that you don't know the difference between love and letting a kid have his own way all the time. Caving in to a child's demands is not "love" it's the easy way to buy peace and quiet.

Confidential to: Undecided M.D.: Physician, heal thyself. You're sick, man. You might be able to pull off this neat maneuver but if your identity is ever discovered you'll be a corpse — professionally as well as socially.

Drinking may be "in" to the kids you run with — but it can put you "out" for keeps. You can cool it and stay popular. Read "Booze and You — For Teen-Agers Only." Send 35c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Girl Takes ROTC Course At College

By JANE BENNETT
The Springfield Leader and Press
For The Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP)—There were a lot of unofficial "eyes right" and "eyes left" this week in a Reserve Officers Training Corps class at Southwest Missouri State College.

For the first time in the history of the cadet unit at the college a girl is taking an ROTC course. However, she is allowed only to audit the course, that is, to attend witrout credit.

Miss Sheila Martin, a 19-year-old sophomore, is the lady rookie getting all the attention.

She enrolled in the course, she said, "to find out more about the Army."

In the class, Military Science 102, are more than 100 men.

Miss Martin described their reaction to her appearance at first class this way:

"It was like a regular class except that the boys reacted differently. They laughed and they acted like they couldn't believe I was there."

The class meets twice a week, but Miss Martin is excused from one phase, a one-hour drill session each week.

ROTC officers said there were not the proper facilities there for a female.

Army terminology won't bother her too much because she was born an Army "brat." She has been in Germany, France and England, where her father has been stationed. Last summer she served as ecretary to a colonel in the Quartermater Corps in Pusan, Korea.

Her father is now stationed there with the Korean Advisory Group. Also there are her mother, two brothers and a sister.

"I wrote my parents about my intentions," she said, "but I haven't received a reply yet. My father will probably laugh. I'm sure he will be enthusiastic about it because he is gun ho about the Army."

She is 5-5; weighs 115 pounds and measures 34-23-35.

SNOW BUNNIES MUST BE WATCHED for signs of fatigue and snow blindness. Stops for "eye-breaks" and "warm-ups" help children enjoy their fun in the snow. A few drops of eye lotion will provide soothing relief from the sun's glare in the snow, and overexposure to the wind.

Dentistry—Vietnam Style Count your blessings during Children's Dental Health Week, which begins today. An American Dental Association task force recently visited South Vietnam and came back with this report: only 130 dentists serve that country's 16 million people. That's one dentist for every 125,000 patients! If a South Vietnamese gets a toothache, he usually visits a self-accredited "sidewalk dentist," who painfully but ceremoniously yanks the hurting tooth. Then the "dentist" places it on the top of a pile of other pulled teeth, which he displays to advertise his craft.

Confederate Survivors Virginia still boasts 67 Confederate widows (average age 87), who receive monthly pensions of $50 from the state. In addition, more than 1,000 Confederate soldiers' daughters get $15 a month. Three of the widows and about 70 daughters live in the Confederate Home for Women in Richmond. There a lamp shines on a portrait of Robert E. Lee day and night.

Hawkins Returns Jack Hawkins, whose bout with throat cancer was described previously in this column, has had a successful operation on his vocal chords and returns to the screen in the movie version of Bernard Shaw's "Great Catherine." Jack will appear throughout the picture but will only have one line to speak. "It's easy," he says, due to the breathing-talking technique he uses. The director is Peter O'Toole, and Jack says, "I owe Peter a lot for taking such a chance on me."

Video Hash Television executives have come up with a proposed new show called "Occasional Family." Insiders point out that the title is a combination of two existing hit comedy titles, "Occasional Wife" and "Family Affair." If the new show is a success, watch for other show titles to be combined. Some tongue-in-cheek possibilities: "Petticoat Patrol," "Please Don't Eat the Spy," "Pistols 'n' Gunsmoke," "Voyage to the Bottom of Space," "Saturday Night at the Ponderosa," "The Uncle from G.I.R.L."

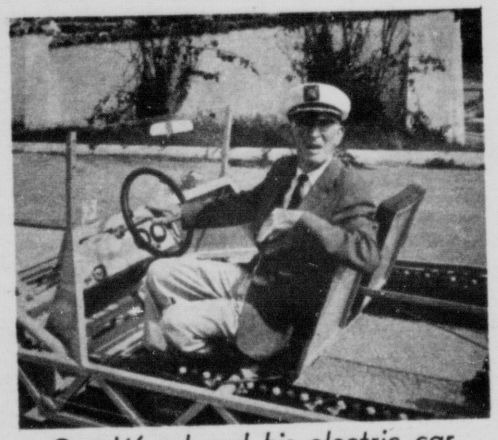

Marlene on Age Asked about how she keeps looking "so terribly young," actress Marlene Dietrich replies:

Marlene Dietrich

"Simple. I am not so terribly old. When you get as old as people make you out to be, they add 10 years to your age. I am always longest going through customs because everybody packs around to try and see my passport." One reference book lists her age as 63—but they're guessing like everybody else.

Gar Wood Rides Again "The world's about ready for an electric car," says Gar Wood, 86, former powerboat racing champion and holder of a fistful of U.S. patents. "We're about to give it one!" he adds. His white hair streaming out from under his jaunty yachting cap, Gar has been testing an electric automobile on Miami Beach roadways. His car has a top speed of 52 mph. The cost of recharging the batteries (on ordinary house current) is about 20 cents.

Put-Down On the night-club scene for 20 years, comedian Joey Bishop has developed a technique for dealing with hecklers that always works.

"If a heckler shouts at me," reveals Joey, "I don't murder him with a line. I say softly, 'I'm sorry—I didn't hear what you said.' That gets the point across much better than shouting back at him."

lighted with the kids' appeals to the Almighty. Some youngsters are irate rather than pious. Reads one letter, "Dear God: I got left back. Thanks a lot. Raymond."

Danger Signs Traffic experts say these are symptoms of a driver who's about to fall asleep: sudden talking in a louder voice than usual; nodding, yawning, or blinking; fiddling with the car-radio control; nervous tapping on the steering wheel or dashboard; driving up close to cars ahead, then braking suddenly; sharp jerking of the steering wheel or brake pedal, indicating that the driver may be "seeing things." When the nodding starts, the driver should stop—or be stopped.

Two-Faced Sophia Starring in Charlie Chaplin's new film, "A Countess from Hong Kong," Sophia Loren admits she is two-faced. "My left jaw is quite rounded, while the right is straight." How does this effect her film work? "Makes it easy," she confides. "I use my left side for comedy, and the right for drama."

A girl enjoys the unusually clear water off Paradise Beach in the Bahamas.

I Collect Beaches

This globe-trotting correspondent has sunned himself on sandy strands all over the world—and here are his favorites

By RICHARD TREGASKIS

Author of "Guadalcanal Diary," "Vietnam Diary," "Seven Leagues to Paradise," "Last Plane to Shanghai," etc.

SOMETIMES I argue with a friend about which are the best beaches in the world.

He is an authority on the subject, a famed travel writer who has been just about everywhere. I am, on the other hand, a beat-up correspondent who has spent most of his aware years following wars from World War II to Vietnam.

Going to cover the wars has been dusty, muddy, and mostly miserable—but it has given me a chance to pursue an interesting hobby: collecting beaches. Wars always seem to be near pleasant places where you can wash off the dust, grime, and mud, if you can find a day or two for rest and recreation.

I've loved swimming since I was a boy. While at Harvard, my principal claim to fame was that I had a swimming match with another young devotee of the sport, John F. Kennedy. I enjoyed the small distinction of winning this contest, which was to determine who would be the second backstroker on the Harvard varsity.

JFK went on to apply his skill in swimming to much more important uses than I—down there in the Solomons in 1943, when his PT boat was cut in half by a Japanese destroyer.

I also kept on swimming and enjoying the marvelous conditioning benefits of the sport. I love beaches very much—so much so that I try to collect them like precious art.

Here are my choices for the best beaches in the world:

Waikiki: One of the most famous beaches, it lies near downtown Honolulu. Much maligned by the oversophisticated as being overcommercialized, it is nevertheless one of the world's best blends of all the things that make a beach desirable.

The main strip of sand at Waikiki is too narrow and short, and the swimming from it is impeded by vast shoals of coral rock. But the water is beautifully clear and warm, and, best of all, there are layers of rolling white foam a quarter of a mile out—with a scattering of surfers gracefully riding the curves of the breakers.

And for those who value such other pastimes of the seashore resort as dancing, music, food, drink, and cabarets, Waikiki offers the full package, including hula shows and a broad spectrum of restaurants.

Kaanapali: For swimming, there are many more nearly perfect strands in Hawaii than Waikiki—like Kaanapali Beach on the island of Maui.

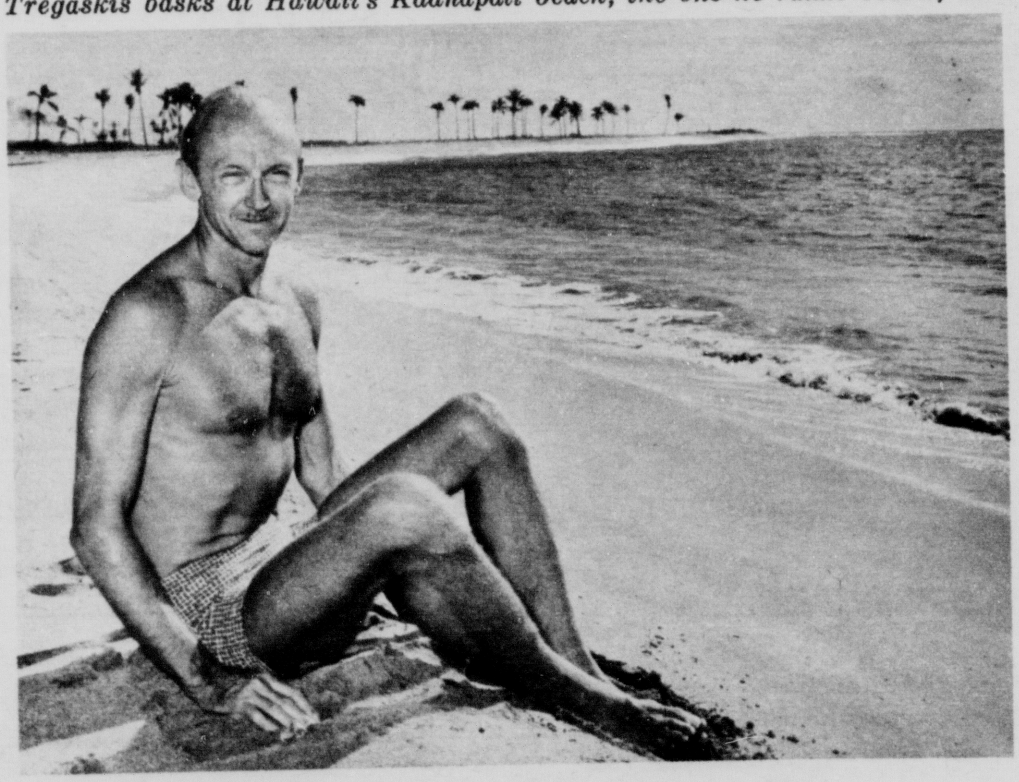

Kaanapali, meaning "the departing place of souls," is a rocky promontory in the middle of a beach—or, more accurately, it is a stone jetty with a half-mile of near-perfect beach on each side of it.

The jettylike promontory is a sacred place in Hawaiian tradition, where the bodies of the alii, or nobles, used to be taken for marine burial. It has been years since the custom was followed, and now the two quarter-moons of white sand beaches are merely divine places from which people can swim.

If you go out from the fine white strand, you will be swimming in water so clear that you can't tell whether it is five-feet or 30-feet deep. The water is almost as transparent as air and offers as good a place to swim as any I know.

Australia's Gold Coast: Leaving Hawaii, you go west and south to Australia's Gold Coast, a 20-mile strip of beaches just south of Brisbane. You can now get to Brisbane from Hawaii on nonstop jet service by Qantas, Australia's round-the-world airline. The trip is 4,500 miles, and it takes 9½ hours.

Tregaskis basks at Hawaii's Kaanapali beach, the one he ranks best of all.

Once you are there, you will see one of the wonders of the beach-resort world. The beaches in this string have a potpourri of names: Coolangatta, Burleigh Heads, Currumbin, Greenmount, Kirra, Broadbeach, and Surfers' Paradise.

The sand up and down this strip is white, and, as you walk in for your swim, the bottom underfoot is as a swimmer would have it: hard, clean ripples with no coral to cut you. And the water, too, is swimmer's water—warm and clear.

The Gold Coast also has more than its share of seaside blandishments—and at the world's lowest prices. There are good restaurants, cabarets, motels, and two big luxury hotels. I'm especially fond of Surfers' Paradise, which has marvelous food, a cosmopolitan air, and a lovely beach.

South Vietnam: If a battalion of salesmen in gray flannel suits were loosed with American capital along the 350 miles of heavenly beach from Phan Rang to Phan Tiet, they would soon create a Gold Coast to end all Gold Coasts.

This may be only a dream right now, but I can foresee a day—after the war is over—when the Vietnam veterans come back in comfortable middle age to sit on beach terraces while their children amuse themselves in the warm, transparent azure of the South China Sea. It could happen.

Leaving Vietnam, I would skip across the rest of Asia—and all of Europe. The French and Italian Riviera resorts are famous for visits by the Jet Set. But the fact remains that the Mediterranean beaches usually are small or rocky or both and are uninhabitable in the winter.

Paradise Beach: There are many beaches in the Caribbean, but my favorite is Paradise Beach, a short ferry ride from downtown Nassau in the Bahamas.

I have swum in Puerto Rico, tried Candado and Luquillo (supposed to be the world's best) and Magen's Bay and Morningstar Beach in the nearby Virgin Islands. But I have never seen a beach like Paradise—or, more exactly, a beach with water like that.

The left end of Paradise, as you face the sea, is a curving, firm arc of fine white sand with nicely tended trees behind it, and in front of it, the most fantastic swimming water you can imagine.

The water has a brilliance, a gemlike quality, which you don't see

367 TEST CASES PROVE "INSTANT EXERCISE" WORKS!

Get the slimmer, healthier body you want with this fabulous new minute-a-day static short-cut... the most popular exercises ever developed in the U.S.

NEW YORK MODEL, TV personality and mother of 2 teenagers, Loree Thomas, slimmed down her waist, hips and thighs in just 15 days with Dr. Salls' almost effortless exercises.

Imagine! Now just one almost effortless exercise can help shape you up better than 24 push-ups a day! Six seconds of muscle magic can slim down a waistline by inches in days... and no diet! A single exercise can double strength with miraculous speed!

Now you can tone up and trim down in record time... without moving a muscle, without "working out" more than 1 minute a day. Doctors, nurses, athletes, insurance firms, citizens everywhere are turning to the amazingly simple isometric exercises developed by Alabama Doctor of Education, fitness expert and former coach, Donald J. Salls. The Navy and Marines have adopted this type of exercise, too. Even the astronauts use them!

Why? Simply because isometric exercises, better known to so many as Dr. Salls' "Static Exercises," really do work. They're so effective that fewer than 1% of the thousands who have purchased a set under his personal guarantee have asked for their money back. Less than 1%!

In fact, results have been so spectacular that skeptics asked for special effectiveness studies under independent professional supervision. But in test after test it's been the same dramatic story:

In one group of 253 girls, over 96% improved in physical fitness and over 50% had marked figure improvements... all in just 3 weeks, using Dr. Salls' motionless exercises for 1 minute per day.

Over 92% of another group had waistline improvements, decreases of up to 3¼ inches... thighs, 84%... hips, over 96%. Again in 3 weeks or less!

80% of still another group, measured periodically under the watchful eye of a physician, showed marked measurement improvements in less than 30 days.

A top university had one test group use isometrics for 1 minute daily while another worked on gym equipment for 45 minutes every day. When compared for fitness, the isometric exercisers scored highest in every test!

Here at last is one type of exercise that appeals to car-riding, machine-minded Americans..."weekend athletes," people who hate to exercise or don't have time. Here is the answer for the desk-bound man who wants to look trimmer, more muscular... for the modern woman who knows so well how important a slimmer, more attractive figure can be... for the oldster who seeks to improve fitness, figure and life-span by restoring long-neglected muscles without prolonged exercise.

Each of Dr. Salls' wonderfully simple basic exercises takes 6 seconds. All total just 1 minute per day. Instructions are graded for housewives, executives, teenagers and senior citizens, for superior fitness and prowess in such sports as bowling, swimming, golf. And you can do most of these exercises almost anywhere... at work, waiting for a bus, while shaving. No gadgets are required. There's no extreme exertion, not even heavy breathing!

The revolutionary principle Dr. Salls applies has the impressive support of highly respected educational institutions, leading physiologists, Olympic stars, fashion models, police groups, top pro and college athletes. And Time, Life, Reader's Digest, TV, newspapers, scientific journals have called attention to the exciting concept.

Followers of Dr. Salls' muscle magic report surprising results. For example, the stronger, tighter muscles resulting from his minute-a-day plan can lead quickly to a slimmer figure... even without weight reduction!

Mrs. P. McMorrow of White Plains writes, "I reduced my waist 2 inches, my hips 2 inches — all in 2 weeks, a minute a day, with your exercises."

John B. Villano, Denver, reports: "Excellent results! My waist has gone from 36½ to 32—down 4½ inches. My chest increased from 41 to 43 inches."

Mrs. E. V. Smith of Madison writes that with Dr. Salls' exercises she's trimmed down her waist from 33½ to 28½, her hips from 43½ to 39½.

Carlyle Hall, Springfield, 91 years old and "still very active," says: "Your exercises are worth a hundred times their cost. They certainly work for me."

So many users of Dr. Salls' exercises also exclaim: "How much better... more alive, more alert, more youthful... I feel!" But specifically, he offers:

stronger, firmer muscles · slimmer waist, hips, thighs, calves, upper arms and neck · better muscular coordination · stronger back · improved posture.

Results are controlled primarily by the individual's own desires. If a man wants weight-lifter's strength, he can simply concentrate more often on certain of Dr. Salls' exercises. If a housewife seeks a more shapely midriff, a few weeks with several of his 6-second workouts is indicated.

Yes, now you can have a stronger, slimmer, healthier body without the strain or boredom of old-fashioned exercises! Dr. Salls will send a complete set of his instructions, in a large, fully illustrated folder, to interested readers who use the coupon on this page. Remember! These exercises are different: just 6 seconds each!

I Went to College— a

Crossing the campus, the author (in high heels) is surrounded by other students who could be her children.

This housewife knew that "old crocks" had no business sitting in class with youngsters— but she was determined to try

By JEAN CLARK

Jean Clark studies for examination.

ARE YOU a woman born between World War I and World War II? Did the depression, the war, or an early marriage prevent you from completing college?

Now that you are more mature, do you ever think about going back to school?

Here is a recently devised test that will measure the strength of your motivation and help you to decide whether you ought to take such a step:

- 1. Would you rather read than watch television?
- 2. Do you wish you could do work that would give you a feeling of real achievement?
- 3. Do you feel a need to exchange ideas with thinking people?
- 4. Have you ever caught yourself abjectly apologizing because you are not a college graduate?
- 5. Are you restless?
- 6. Have your vocabulary and the scope of your knowledge increased during the past year?
- 7. Did you do fairly well in high school or in earlier college work?
- 8. Are many of your friends college graduates?
- 9. Do you daydream about being a doctor, teacher, etc?
- 10. Are you a clipper of such things as book reviews and articles about new psychological theories?
- 11. Are you stimulated rather than cowed by a challenge?
- 12. Could you skip all but the essentials of housework without feeling guilty?

Now score yourself:

Ten or more "yes" answers: You definitely want to go to college. Start making plans.

Seven to nine: The motivation is there, but you're still vacillating. Take one or two night courses for a start.

Four or five: You're restless but the idea of all that studying unnerves you. You would be better off taking a job.

Three or less: You don't really want to go to college; you just like to take tests.

How valid is this test? Unfortunately I have not tried it on anyone except myself—but I can say that it did work for me. Stimulated by my impressive score, I immediately hot-rodded 45 miles to the nearest college in Danbury, Conn., got an appointment with the director of admissions, and laid my aging credits on the table.

He was just as nice as he could be as he told me that credits more than seven years old are rarely honored, enrollment had doubled, and the school was overcrowded.

"I'm just too old," I said.

He looked at my records and then winked at me. "You're not old at all, kid," he said humorously. "We're contemporaries."

But before my application could be considered, he said I would have to take the S.A.T.—the Scholastic Achievement Test of the College Entrance Examination Board.

Next morning, hoping I looked like a mother inquiring about her children, I slunk into our high-school guidance counselor's office and asked for a preregistration form for the S.A.T. She, too, was a contemporary of mine, but she did not talk down to me. She gave me the forms and said that if I were like most adults I'd do well on the verbal half of the test and poorly on the math.

Until I looked over the sample test, I wasn't especially worried. Hadn't I once mastered geometry and algebra? Ah, yes. But how do you add $\frac{3}{8}$ and $\frac{5}{16}$? That night I asked my husband.

"First," he said, "you find the least common denominator." He waited, "Well, what is it?"

"I don't know. You tell me."

He gave me what I believe is called a withering look. "How do you expect to get through college," he said, "when you can't even do fourth-grade arithmetic?"

I had been wondering the same thing myself, but hearing him say it made me angry enough so that I was determined to try. On a hot morning in mid-July, I took the test. I was the only adult among 50 youngsters ("adult" being a euphemism for "old crock"). Unfortunately my brain had not yet been turned on. But my stomach was energetically trying to turn itself inside out.

Generation Late!

I found a tin of antacid tablets in my purse. It was not until two of them were dissolving in my mouth that I remembered I had filled the tin with aspirin several weeks before. I swallowed them, and I learned something important. When your whole future is at stake, you do not throw up.

I left the testing room feeling like a failure. I was not surprised when, as summer neared its end, I had still received no word from the college I wanted to enter.

But after I had given up and told everybody I really didn't care anyway, I received an acceptance for the fall term! I was going to college—a generation late.

It rained a long, soaking rain the first day of orientation week. I sat damply in the auditorium listening to a lecture on how we were young ladies and gentlemen now and ought to act as such.

We sloshed our way around the campus and dripped our way through various buildings. At noon I ate my peanut butter sandwich in my cold, damp car, and a young fellow in a white convertible backed into me while I was drinking my milk. I began to wish I had thrown up while I was taking the S.A.T. It was clear that if I continued in this impossible situation I would always be wet, cold, forlorn, humiliated, and covered with spilled milk.

We dare you to clip this coupon without looking on the back.

I Went to College— a Generation Late!

My first days with molecular biology did not improve my disposition. Take this lab problem: "Dissolve nucleic acid precipitate in 1 ml N H_2SO_4. Transfer half to small test tube and heat 30 minutes in a boiling-water bath. Check pH. Neutralize with Ba $(OH)_2$." I just stared at it.

"Lost?" my instructor asked.

"I am."

"Don't be upset. I'm sure I'd be just as lost in a kitchen. What seems to be the trouble?"

I answered deviously, "Well, I'm not at all sure how to measure a ml exactly."

"It doesn't have to be exact. Just come as close as you can." He patted me on the shoulder and then walked away.

During that semester I knocked branches off the molecular structures of polysaccharides, studied enzymes in action, spied on mating paramecia, and then spent hours afterward trying to figure out what I had done so I could write a detailed report.

The humanities, the social sciences, and psychology were a pleasure to study. It's fun to watch a drowsy mind awaken to the excitement of new ideas. When the mind you're watching happens to be your own, it's more than just fun; it's deeply satisfying.

How do older students do academically? Old wives say people do not learn as easily as they grow older. Don't listen. Listen instead to my psychology professor who will tell you that there is no diminishing of the learning process until hardening of the arteries of the brain sets in.

There are, in fact, points in your favor simply by virtue of maturity. You have been in contact with so many ideas through the years that your grasp of new ideas is good. Your vocabulary is probably more extensive than that of most younger students.

You will have put behind you most of the emotional problems that harass young people. You are not besieged by the need to decide whether Jim really meant what he said last night or whether you really love Tim.

Unfortunately, you may find you tire easily and cannot, like the young people, forego a night's sleep before an exam. Occasionally, too, domestic problems will interfere with the time you have set aside for study. If you have planned carefully, however, you will have curtailed most outside interests and will leave major housework tasks for vacations.

Women who undertake the double job of schooling and homemaking usually have definite goals. Teaching and social work are most often mentioned. Some are interested in speech therapy, guidance, or in working with children in drama groups; others are drawn to research or laboratory work in hospitals. I have met two women who plan to start nursery schools in their own homes.

The opportunity to use your talents during the years which were once considered the least productive of a woman's life is an alluring goal. It is the goal that sends me off to school five days a week through rain, fog, and snow, the goal that sustains me through parking, physics, and math problems, and through the tension of final exams.

It is the goal that often makes me forget I am an anachronism—even when I am the only "old crock" in a classroom. ◆

For St. Valentine's Day

MELANIE DE PROFT Food Editor

This attractive Cherry Cottage Cheese Salad Mold will appeal to the feminine fancy for a St. Valentine's Day luncheon or a buffet supper.

Cherry Cottage Cheese Salad Mold

- 1 pkg. (3 oz.) cherry-flavored gelatin
- 1 cup boiling water
- 1 can (1 lb. 1 oz.) pitted dark sweet cherries in heavy syrup, drained, reserving 1 cup syrup
- ½ cup chopped pecans
- ¼ cup finely chopped pitted green olives
- 1 pkg. (3 oz.) lemon-flavored gelatin
- 1 cup boiling water
- 1 can (13½ oz.) crushed pineapple, drained, reserving ½ cup syrup
- 1½ cups cream-style cottage cheese, sieved
- ¼ cup chopped pecans
- 1 teaspoon grated onion
- ½ teaspoon grated lemon peel
- ½ teaspoon celery seed
- ½ teaspoon celery salt
- 1 teaspoon sugar

1. Pour 1 cup boiling water over cherry-flavored gelatin in a medium-sized bowl and stir until completely dissolved. Mix in the reserved cherry syrup (add water to make 1 cup if necessary). Chill over ice and water until slightly thicker than consistency of thick, unbeaten egg white; stir frequently.

2. Meanwhile, halve cherries. Fold cherries, the ½ cup chopped nuts, and olives into thickened gelatin. Spoon into a 7-cup heart-shaped or other fancy-shaped mold. Chill until set but not firm.

3. Meanwhile, pour 1 cup boiling water over lemon-flavored gelatin in a medium-sized bowl and stir until completely dissolved. Mix in the reserved pineapple syrup. Chill over ice and water until slightly thicker than consistency of thick, unbeaten egg white; stir frequently.

4. Blend pineapple, cottage cheese, and remaining ingredients and stir into thickened gelatin until thoroughly mixed. Spoon over cherry layer; chill until firm, at least 3 hrs.

5. Unmold onto chilled serving plate; garnish with lettuce. Pipe dairy sour cream around the outer top edge of mold. 8 to 10 servings

Note: This salad may be prepared in individual molds and unmolded onto a large platter of salad greens.

Chicken Elegante

For the buffet supper, serve this fine mixture from a chafing dish.

- ¼ cup butter
- 3 tablespoons regular all-purpose flour
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon white pepper
- 1 cup chicken broth
- 1 cup light cream
- ¼ cup shredded Parmesan cheese
- ¼ cup crumbled blue cheese
- Cooked chicken, cut in pieces (1½ cups)
- Cooked ham, cut in strips (1 cup) plus 6 small triangular pieces
- 1 pkg. (10 oz.) frozen broccoli spears, cooked, drained, and cut in pieces

1. Melt butter in a heavy 2-qt. saucepan; stir in flour, salt, and pepper. Gradually add broth, mixing until smooth. Bring to boiling, stirring constantly; cook and stir 1 to 2 minutes. Reduce heat; gradually add cream, mixing until blended. Stir in cheeses until smooth.

2. Mix in chicken, ham strips (not triangles), and broccoli, reserving six flowerets. Heat thoroughly.

3. Spoon chicken mixture onto heated luncheon plates and garnish top of each serving with a ham triangle and a broccoli floweret. Put two spiced crab apples to one side. Serve with celery sticks and hot rolls. 6 servings

Cherry Cottage Pudding

Warm from the oven and topped with whipped sour cream and maraschino cherries, here is a treat for your family any time of the year.

- 1 can (1 lb.) water pack tart red cherries, drained and halved
- 2 cups sifted regular all-purpose flour
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ¼ cup butter
- ½ teaspoon almond extract
- ¾ cup sugar
- 1 egg
- 1 cup dairy sour cream
- ¼ cup milk

1. Drain cherries on absorbent paper.

2. Blend next four ingredients.

3. Cream the butter and extract in a mixing bowl. Add sugar gradually, beating constantly until thoroughly creamed. Add egg and continue beating until light and fluffy.

4. Alternately add dry ingredients in thirds and liquids in halves, beating only until blended. Fold in half of the cherries.

5. Turn batter into a buttered 9x9x 2-in. pan, spreading evenly to edges. Arrange remaining cherries, pit side down, on batter; press gently.

6. Bake at 375°F. about 35 min., or until a cake tester inserted in center of cake comes out clean. Set on a wire rack to cool slightly.

7. Meanwhile, whip ¾ cup dairy sour cream in a chilled bowl using chilled beaters until cream piles softly. If desired, blend in sifted confectioners' sugar to taste.

8. Cut warm cottage pudding into serving-sized pieces and place on dessert plates. Put a dollop of whipped sour cream on top of each serving. Top generously with quartered maraschino cherries.

Bringing Up Baby®

Hints Collected
by Mrs. Dan Gerber, Mother of Five

FIRST AND SECOND BABIES

There's a theory that second babies cry less than first timers because there is less hovering and mother-henning over second babies. As a consequence, they learn not to expect pickups at the drop of a whimper. And since they are left somewhat more to their own devices, they learn to amuse themselves faster.

Three times the meat of regular vegetable-meat dinners. That's the hearty story on Gerber High Meat Dinners. And more meat, of course, means more protein... a factor in your baby's growing process. Beef, Chicken, Ham, Turkey and Veal in both strained and junior varieties, with the nutritional and flavor benefits of bright garden vegetables. These savory meat-vegetable "casseroles" make delightful main dishes for your little one.

It's "unfair to compare" goes an old saying. Wise words and true when it comes to babies. So try not to compare your children with each other or with the little fellow down the street. No matter what they do when, most babies catch up with each other in the end.

Two-way play. If you've two under 3, toddler jealousy can usually be turned into delight if you create some fun in which baby #2 can't participate. Your toddler will bask in the attention.

Sensible substitution. Any Gerber Cereal (dry) may be used instead of bread crumbs in meat loaves: ½ cup of cereal per pound of meat.

More on growing and going. During that all-important first year, your baby is on the grow and go every minute, every day, asleep or awake. Another fine protein food to help your baby grow: Gerber High Protein Cereal. How? It has a 35% protein content, that's what. Add to this, a delightful, toasty, nut-like flavor, and you've got it made for good nutrition and eating pleasure. Gerber® Baby Products, Box 33, Fremont, Michigan.

When you are the one to whom others look

Someday, a relative, a dear friend, is going to turn to you in time of bereavement.

And you will go. To be helpful. To be close. With the warmth of your love. And the gentleness of your understanding.

And in this trying hour you will be particularly grateful for the strengthening and consoling presence of your clergyman . . . for the funeral director, too, whom you will find an island of calm with quiet, knowing, sympathetic answers to the multitude of sudden, insistent questions.

We think you will be grateful that one question is already answered in your mind. For years you have known that the burial vault that provides the finest tribute, the most trusted protection is the Clark Metal Grave Vault. No other vault in America is asked for by name by so many families.

Would you like to know *how to be more comforting and helpful to those who have suffered loss? Write for a free copy of "My Duty". Its 32 pages tell you "what to do" when you are asked to take charge . . . how to write sympathy notes. It contains many beautiful poems that have brought consolation to millions. Steve and his wife Neile appear at the premiere of "The Sand Pebbles."

Life with the "Mellowed" Steve McQueen

When his wife Neile Adams first met him, he was an angry young man on a motorcycle; now he has curbed his speed and temper—well, mostly

By PEER J. OPPENHEIMER

ONE NIGHT a few weeks ago, Steve McQueen stepped out of his living room onto the terrace overlooking Los Angeles—and suddenly stopped. On a nearby 20-foot-high wall, his five-year-old son Chad was balancing precariously.

"Stay there, and I'll be right up, Chad," Steve announced calmly. Then, controlling his anxiety, he climbed the wall and carefully guided his son to safety. When they were back on the terrace, he gave Chad one whale of a spanking!

"Steve makes a wonderful father," his wife, actress Neile Adams, says. "His first concern is always that Terry (she's 7) and Chad are all right. He loves them, but he won't spoil them."

The public does not read much about Steve's home life because he is reluctant to discuss it. "I have a very tight-knit family, but you've got to build a wall around them to keep people out because the world is full of phonies," Steve once told me.

It is easier to get to know what he's like through his wife and intimate friends such as men's hair stylist Jay Sebring, who visits with Steve and Neile almost every weekend.

"What do we do?" says Sebring. "Nothing special. We play a little pool or we sit around and gab. Once in a while if Steve needs a haircut, I give him one right in his living room or on the porch. Most of all, we share a common appreciation for mechanical things."

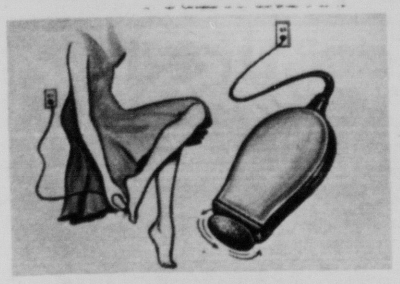

I've long been familiar with Steve's mania for automobiles and motorcycle racing and also with Neile's worry about these competitions. Yet she never attempted to keep her husband from them. "I never tried to change him," she says. "He does what he likes when he likes."

Much to Neile's relief, Steve has finally given up competitive racing (although he still drives high-powered racers for fun). "Maybe," she muses, "he just got older." But Steve says: "I recognize my responsibilities to my family. Racing is for professionals. My profession is acting."

Another change has been observed in McQueen since his early days of stardom. He has finally learned to relax. "He can sit at home for hours doing nothing," Neile says. "He doesn't particularly like to read, and except for playing pool and his passion for cars and motorcycles (the one in his garage he built himself), he really doesn't have other pastimes."

It was Neile who found their $300,000 Brentwood estate, formerly occupied by actress Terry Moore. It was Neile, too, who decorated it completely, getting nodding but fairly indifferent approval from her husband along the way. They have a pool used primarily by Neile, the children, and friends. Steve—who used to be a professional skin diver—developed ear trouble as a result of underwater pressure. This explains why sometimes you have to repeat things to him, and why he isn't as fond of the water as he used to be.

Steve McQueen

Don't get the idea, though, that at 36 Steve is turning into a fuddy-duddy. "I can still swing with the best of 'em," he says—and I can confirm it.

I remember Steve calling me at 11 one night, insisting my wife and I join him and Neile at the Whisky à Go-Go, the most crowded of all Los Angeles' clubs. "Man, you haven't lived until you've been here," he shouted when we arrived. He had to shout. The music drowned out conversation.

For six months he and Neile could be found at the same table almost every night (when they weren't on the packed dance floor). Today, although Whisky a Go-Go owner Elmer Valentine is a close friend, Steve's visits have become sporadic. He makes up for it with parties of his own.

The McQueens have earned a reputation for throwing some of the swingingest parties in town. They are careful to invite people who Steve and Neile are sure will get along—not always an easy task in an industry where half the people are feuding.

Dress is strictly Mod, the food invariably catered. For the last party, Steve hired two bands to play alternately. The party lasted until 5 a.m., after which everyone headed to a small diner—for breakfast.

It is Neile who appears most delighted by the various changes in Steve, particularly when she thinks back to how he was when they met in New York 10 years ago.

"He had dinner at Downey's, a sort of poor man's Sardi's, when I walked in with a mutual friend," Neile says. "I was in 'Pajama Game' at the time. Steve was eating spaghetti, and when he saw me in my tight-fitting toreador pants and knit sweater, half the spaghetti on his fork dropped on the table. I was very pleased with his reaction.

"We stopped by to say hello, and Steve asked us to join him. Later we made a date for the following Sunday—which consisted of hopping on his motorcycle and flying up one avenue and down another! 'Do you always race around town like this?' I asked him. 'Not always,' Steve came back. 'Sometimes I'm going someplace.' "

But at that time he actually wasn't always going places. Steve knew he wanted to become an actor, but there was little sense of direction in either his professional or personal life. Mostly he was against things rather than for things, a leftover from a tough childhood that at one time led him into a school for troublemakers and, while in the Marines, repeatedly landed him in the brig. He held some 50 odd jobs before he finally decided on acting, but for many years even that decision seemed to grate on his independence.

In one way, McQueen remains unchanged. That temper is there, although it's no longer the violent kind. "I see it when he turns red," says Neile. "What causes it? Usually when he catches someone lying or trying to take advantage of him."

Says Jay Sebring, "When this happens, and I've seen it happen a number of times since we became friends, he's got to be by himself. Sometimes it's enough if he goes to a different room. Other times he will climb on his motorcycle and go away for a couple of days. But he never forgets to tell Neile where he is so she won't worry."

To show his appreciation for 10 years of marriage, Steve bought a "surprise" present for Neile, an Excalibur SS Roadster, a current model of a 1927-30 Mercedes-Benz SSK. It was typical that Steve, who's not inclined to take chances with that much money, made sure that she had okayed his "surprise" by letting her select the color (dark green).

Neile has just about given up her own career to be with Steve, whether he works in Hollywood or on location, as he did in "The Sand Pebbles."

"I never saw him work so hard or get so bored as after those four months on location in Taiwan," she told me. "By the time we got to Hong Kong, he'd really had it. He couldn't wait to get home."

According to Sebring, Steve's and Neile's marriage "is one of the best I know, in or out of show business."

Steve's statement in that respect is short, to the point, and typical of him: "I love that broad. I couldn't get along without her." ◆

Chemist Experiments with Honey and Egg...Discovers How To

TIGHTEN SAGGING SKIN ON FACE AND THROAT

A laboratory experiment with natural bee's honey and extract of egg may prove to be the best news ever for sagging, drooping skin that makes face and throat look old and dowdy.

FANTASTICALLY FAST, SAFE, EASY

This new honey and egg skin-tightening recipe has been blended into a delightful new cream formula for easy home use. A thin coating spread over face and neck almost immediately makes the skin feel wonderfully stimulated as the tightening process begins.

Smoothes and Tightens Sagging Skin in These Critical Areas

The skin undergoes a delightful, cooling temperature change . . . feels ever tighter as the process continues. The honey and egg dries to a glazed finish as nature's own ingredients continue to perform their skin-tightening magic.

And it's so fantastically easy! Just spread over skin with the fingertips, leave on for 15-minute tightening process, then . . . easiest of all . . . cool, clear water removes every trace in seconds! Skin looks and feels smoother, tighter, more alluring. Your face and neck may look younger, firmer, more vibrant and glowing than they have for years! Make-up looks more natural and stays looking fresh and lovely hours longer.

SMOOTHER, TIGHTER SKIN

Tests proved conclusively that using nature's own Honey and Egg for new skin beauty, produced these long-lasting beneficial effects on all textures and types of skin: (1) gave the skin a tingling, refreshing coolness "just like a beauty shop facial"; (2) tightened sagging, drooping skin, left it feeling taut and firm; (3) weathered, aging skin felt ultra-smooth again.

NO-RISK TRIAL OFFER

No you're not too old to look younger. Order by mail. A long-lasting supply costs only $3.00 on guarantee of satisfaction or money back. Try it today and see if it isn't the best way ever to make old, sagging facial and throat skin look and feel smooth again!

MARGUERITE CARTER

The racial unrest and travail we are now witnessing was described in a book by this woman, 20 years ago! In a recent publication she accurately predicted four out of six states that would experience the most violent disorder in the past year and one-half. Marguerite Carter's prophecies and their startling verifications have been read across the nation! The amazing fulfillment of these predictions, published September 1, 1965, came less than one year after their publication: . . . Romania's declaration of separation from Russia . . . the plots to overthrow Nasser of Egypt . . . the new all Negro unions as a part of the civil rights movement . . . an end to one phase of Alabama Governor Wallace's career and a return to the spotlight . . . the financial crisis of England!

Over three decades of writing for newspapers, counseling, lecturing, and traveling the world over to study the knowledge of ancient civilizations make her writings some of the most intriguing ever published. Miss Carter is recognized as a leader in the field of interpretation of planetary influences.

Thousands know Miss Carter for her Unitology Forecast and avail themselves of this guidance year after year. Persons in every walk of life have found the understanding and help they sought in her Forecast. Letters express their gratitude: ". . . without the guidance I received from you I would have been lost. I'm like a new person." C.S., New Jersey. ". . . words are very difficult to express my gratitude to you for it fills me with enthusiasm and hope for the future." M.H., British Columbia. ". . . the Forecast prevented me from making some serious mistakes and the guidance it gives is a constant sustainer and helper." E.T., Colombia, S.A.

The remarkable faculty and knowledge, the dedication and sincerity are evident on every page of Miss Carter's Unitology Forecast with Special Notations. It contains guidance that, in her opinion, can open the door to a bright, new future; outstanding indications of changes, home life, associations with others, financial outlook and opportunities are covered. Send now! Make the next twelve months the most rewarding of your life!

Request Miss Carter's Unitology Forecast with Special Notations for the year ahead. It will be compiled, based on birthdate information. Print month, day, year, place, hour of birth (if known) and include $3.85 plus 15¢ toward mailing costs. Please allow three weeks for receipt of Miss Carter's Unitology Forecast. Address: Marguerite Carter, 504 Jackson Building, Indianapolis, Indiana 46225.

even at Kaanapali in Hawaii. The feeling you get when you dive in is that you have come into a wide amphitheater with a firm, white sand bottom, a dream atmosphere with the clean, mellow light of New England before sunset on a fall day—but under water.

To the right there are submerged islands of coral which seem to float past you as you swim. They are like bright-colored continents with colonies of shimmering fish that hover, then disappear in a flash.

But there are imperfections in the water world of the Bahamas, too—aren't there always some anywhere?

One big handicap in the Nassau locality is the vulgar but vital matter of price. In winter the hotels run from $50-up a day. A travel-wise friend of mine says: "You just need one thing in Nassau—plenty of money."

Another handicap, if you are judging the Nassau beaches against world-wide competition, is that there is nothing for our sun-browned lovers of the breakers, the surfies. There's no good short, long, high, or low surf suitable for boards or even for body surfing. And without breakers and surfers, much of its beauty for mere spectators is lost.

The American West Coast: The California coast, stretching south across the border of Baja California, has the same feeling of power and adventure you find in the Australian Gold Coast or the beaches of Hawaii.

There is often superb surf at San Onofre and Dana Point near Oceanside, and less often at Huntington Beach, Manhattan Beach, Malibu, and Santa Cruz. Also, just for sitting and tanning, the California beaches are as wide, stunning, and handsome as any I have ever seen.

But there's one flaw in the California beach ointment. Except in midsummer (and sometimes not even then), the water is as cold as a sitz bath in Saskatchewan. The Japan Current, sweeping down from frigid Alaska, adds a definite feel of glacier conditioning to the water of the American West Coast.

Now which of these beaches do I like best?

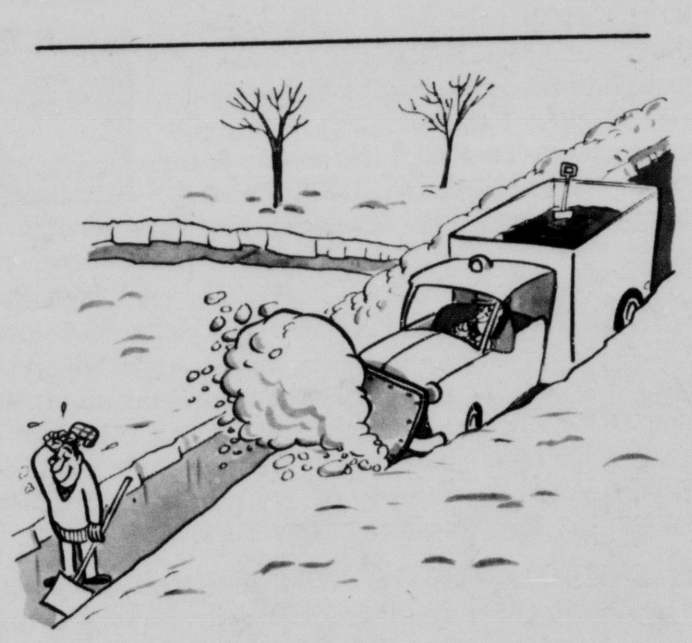

For all the seaside attractions combined in one beach, you can't beat Waikiki. Yet if I were to choose my version of an earthly paradise, seaside type, I would pick Kaanapali; with Surfers' Paradise in Australia a close second. Then would come Paradise Beach in Nassau.

Let Waikiki trail a little in this sweepstakes. I would say it is fourth by my criteria. Yet every day when I am home in Hawaii, I go swimming at Waikiki.

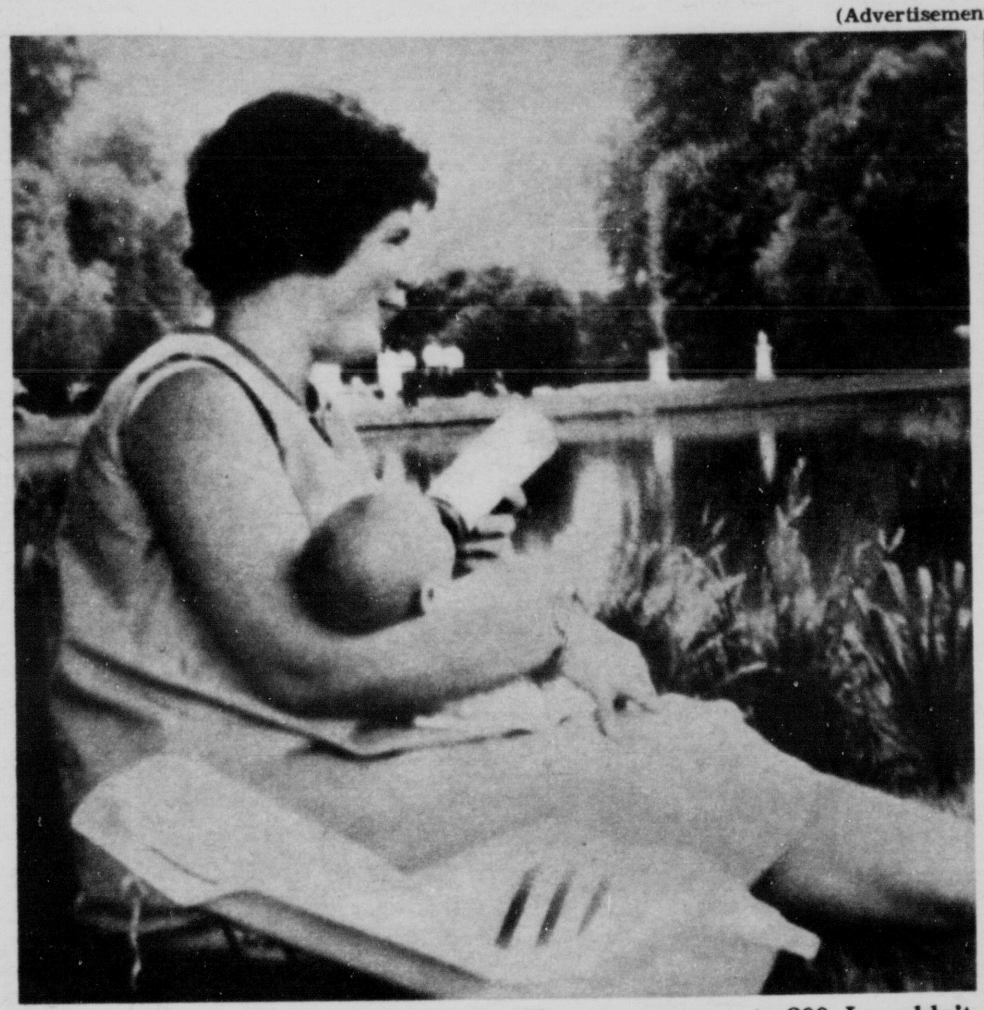

I can't get to Kaanapali often; it is an hour's plane ride away. Australia is 4,500 miles distant, and Nassau is about 6,000 from Hawaii. Like other bumbling humans, I must make do with what is accessible and workable.

But it certainly isn't bad. And I still have my dreams that one day I will find the truly perfect beach.

Got any ideas? ◆

Here I am at "only" 180 pounds. I was still on my way up—to 200. I wouldn't let anybody take my picture when I was that fat! I was too ashamed.

Now look at me. At 140 pounds with a new wardrobe to show off my new figure, I'm proud to say I'm Elizabeth Rhoads of Hightstown, New Jersey.

By Elizabeth Rhoads—as told to Ruth L. McCarthy

MY husband and I had been on a slim budget for years, but I kept getting fatter. And fatter. Not that this was anything new for me. I'd been "nice and solid" all my life. But 200 pounds at 25 years of age is enough to scare anybody.

My weight problem began with peanut butter and jelly sandwiches and sweets whenever I could get them. In seventh grade, I weighed 145 pounds. By the time I was in college, I had hit 165. What a shock that was to my husband. Only he wasn't yet my husband.

Dusty and I were going steady at the time. And I volunteered for a summer job with the American Friends Service Committee. He kissed me good-bye and I headed for Cherokee, North Carolina. There, a group of us dug ditches and helped lay pipelines to provide water supplies for the Cherokee Indians. You'd think with all that hard work, I'd have lost weight. But it only made my appetite heartier. All day I ate peanut butter and jelly sandwiches. In the evening, it was macaroni and cheese or spaghetti. Real blimp food. And did it show!

Fortunately for me, Dusty saw beyond my measurements. He asked me to marry him anyway. When we set the date, I went on the crash diet of my life. Cottage cheese and buttermilk—until I dropped to 135 pounds.

At least, I was a slim bride. But the honeymoon was soon over, and on went the pounds again. Two pregnancies added more weight. About 20 pounds each time. Permanent pounds.

By this time, my husband was in graduate school. There was little money for fun and there was no time for it if we had it. Babies, housework and books—that was my life. Eating was my only diversion. I tried to cover up its effect with full skirts and overblouses. But 180 pounds is hard to hide, believe me.

Finally, in desperation, I went to a doctor. He prescribed reducing pills. Four weeks were all I could take of them, they made me so nervous. And they were all our budget could stand. I gave them up for good.

Then my mother began a succession of bribes. I had been invited to the wedding of my best girl friend. A new dress, my mother said, if I'd lose weight. I didn't—so I went in a dress that was much too tight. When I took off my coat, the skirt had worked itself up to my waist. It was so embarrassing, I wanted to cry. But instead I ate.

Next, my mother said she'd give me one hundred dollars if I'd lose 25 pounds. I took off 24½ and couldn't shed the last half-pound. Back up the scales I went. Even my feet gained weight! I went from a 7½B to an 8C shoe. I was 200 pounds. Just in time for my husband's graduation.

What was I to wear? Again my mother offered to buy me a dress. This time with no strings attached. But we couldn't find one. I finally bought the largest pattern I could get—added to it—and made myself a shift. I went to commencement exercises with a new outfit and a time-worn resolution: "I've got to reduce!" But how?

Then came the luckiest day of my life. I read Edith Henderson's story of how she'd lost 97 pounds with the help of Ayds—a vitamin and mineral reducing plan candy that contained no harmful drugs. Could they really help me?

I bought both the vanilla-caramel kind and the chocolate fudge-type. I took them before each meal as directed. And I took them one other way, too—between meals. That, I think, has been the greatest help of all to me in reducing. Because my greatest problem has always been between-meal nibbling.

On the Ayds Plan, my weight began to come down. Slowly but surely. Whenever I felt the compulsion to eat between meals, I'd just take an Ayds. When we were traveling with the children, I'd take them with me. Then, when we'd stop for hamburgers, my husband would add a milkshake and French fries to his order and I'd subtract them, because of Ayds. They've been terrific for me in that respect. In fact, in all respects. I think Ayds have actually helped me retrain my appetite. I had proof of that not very long ago. We went to a Chinese restaurant for a sort of celebration. And you know how light Chinese food can be. Well, I couldn't even finish my dinner. And that's something for me.

Oh, one last thing. See this bracelet I'm wearing? It's a present from my husband and a record of my weight loss. Each one of these semi-precious stones represents a five-pound loss. As I get lighter, it gets heavier. It's not a terribly expensive bracelet, but it's very precious to me. Right now, you see, it's worth 60 pounds—thanks to Ayds.
